VOL. VI.....NO. 1836 NEW-YORK, FRIDAY, AUGUST 7, 1857. PRICE TWO CENTS.

MRS. CUNNINGHAM.

Report of the Physicians who were Sent to Examine Her.

HER COUNSEL'S ADVICE.

THE COURT PROCEEDINGS.

Mysterious Demand at Bellevue for a Baby.

Personal History of Some of the Witnesses—Boston Gossip About Dr. Uhl—Church Gossip About Mrs. Barnes—Legal Gossip of the Lawyers.

Professor Harrison and Dr. Dewees, arrived at No. 32 Bond-street, yesterday morning, at 10 o'clock. They immediately on entering themselves said the object of their visit, and were shown up to Mrs. Cunningham, which, they found to be in the front room on the second floor, and apparently in great suffering. Shortly afterwards, Judge Davison and Captain Dilks entered the house and walked up stairs. The general belief was that as Counsel, Mrs. Cunningham.

Captain Dilks.

Doctor's conversation, which lasted some quarter of an hour, Mrs. Cunningham said:

"I am quite willing to undergo the examination, Mr. Dewees, but my counsel will not give his consent."

The two following letters had been forwarded to Capt. Dilks for delivery to their respective addresses.

LETTER FROM MR. STAFFORD TO JUDGE DAVISON.

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, Aug. 5, 1857.

DEAR SIR: As Counsel of Mrs. Emma A. Burdell, I am obliged to decline permitting or consenting to her submission to any physical examination under the charge preferred against her, and have accordingly, in accordance with the advice of her attending physician, advised her to refuse so to do.

Yours, &c., WILLIAM K. STAFFORD.

Judge Davison.

LETTER FROM MR. STAFFORD TO THE DISTRICT-ATTORNEY.

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, Aug. 5, 1857.

DEAR SIR: As counsel for Mrs. Emma A. Burdell, I have advised her to decline submitting to any physical examination under the charge preferred against her. Her physician, Dr. Fisk, advises no such examination is necessary in her present condition.

Yours, &c., WILLIAM K. STAFFORD.

E. O. Hall, Esq.

Mr. Cunningham's appearance was seemingly that of great suffering; this was particularly noticed by different parties present. Drs. Dewees and Barker, however, examined her tongue and felt her pulse, and both of these organs told a widely different tale from her professions. However much she may be suffering in part, or suffering mentally, her health is good.

The two medical gentlemen, Judge Davison and Captain Dilks, afterwards left for the Fifteenth Ward Station-house, followed by a crowd of reporters, who, however, had not obtained admission to the house; a very polite exchange being held on these gentlemen.

Professor Harrison and Dr. Dewees, on arriving at the Station-house, called for the bucket of bella, water, hot, or whatever blood it may be, and took a portion of it away with them, as also the afterbirth.

District-Attorney Hall immediately on hearing of Mrs. Cunningham's refusal to undergo the examination, sent advice to Judge Davison, as to the course to be pursued.

PROCEEDINGS IN COURT.

Examination Continued.

TESTIMONY OF DRS. DEWEES AND BARKER.

The evidence of these gentlemen was taken jointly, to the following effect:

Harrison P. Dewees, of No. 68 Clinton-place, and Fordyce Barker, of No. 70 Union place, each being duly sworn, doth depose and say they are practicing physicians in the City of New-York, and that on the morning of the 6th August, 1857, at the request of Justice Davison and District Attorney Hall, they visited the house of Emma A. Cunningham, otherwise Emma A. Burdell, at No. 31 Bond-street, for the purpose of making a physical examination of Mrs. Cunningham as regards the evidence of recent delivery alleged by her to have taken place on the night of Monday last, the 3d inst., and upon stating to her, in the presence of Justice Davison, the object of our visit, and asking her if she was ready to have said physical examination made, she said: "On my own part I do not object to any such examination, but I object to having it made by the advice of my counsel, Mr. Stafford. We further add that no evidences of a recent delivery independent of direct examination were afforded. There were no appearances of late puerperal illness—or of any other symptoms, except those which might be attributed to nervous excitement: and we know no reason, from her physical condition, why she might not now be removed.

And we further testify that we have made a microscopical examination of the blood taken from the pail, and from the placenta, or after-birth, the specimens being given to us by Captain Dilks, of the Fifteenth Ward, and that we find them so differing in their globular appearance and size that we pronounce them to be of different origin.

(Signed) H. P. DEWEES, M. D.,
FORDYCE BARKER, M. D.

Sworn before me, this 6th day of August, 1857, Wm. F. Davison.

This completed the evidence which it is proposed to offer on the part of the People.

Justice Davison, considering the letter (given above) addressed to him by Mr. Stafford, as an official notification that he appeared as counsel for Mrs. Cunningham, sent word to him that he would proceed with the preliminary examination of the accused, according to the statute, at 5 o'clock in the afternoon; and, as she was entitled to the assistance of counsel on that occasion, he requested his attendance.

Mr. Stafford, for answer, said he was too sick to attend that day, but hoped to be able to do so this morning.

The matter, therefore, stands adjourned till this morning, at 10 o'clock.

The Justice informed our reporter that no steps would be taken, in the meantime, to remove Mrs. Cunningham from her present abode in Bond-street—rumors to the contrary notwithstanding.

It now remains to be seen what course will be taken by the counsel for the defence; but it is supposed no testimony on their part will be introduced before the Magistrate.

THE BABY AND SOME NEW LIGHT.

Little Elizabeth Ann (not Anne Justitia) Anderson, &c., continues to thrive, and attracts unabated attention at Bellevue Hospital. The artist of a weekly pictorial has been sketching the lineaments of itself and mother, and in due time the poor little thing will have to suffer the horrors of a wood-cut.

In a conversation with Mrs. Fay, the Matron of Bellevue Hospital, she informs us that, five or six weeks since, "a gentleman applied to her for a new-born, unwashed child, stating that he desired it for a widow, and that the child would become heir to a large estate. The gentleman, after further conversation with Mrs. Fay, and having pledged her to strict secrecy, disclosed the fact that the widow in question was Mrs. Cunningham; that he was a friend of hers, and thought she had been badly used. The matron says she at once informed him that she was well acquainted with Dr. Burdell in his lifetime, and that, at the period of his death, he was engaged in preparing for her a set of teeth, and, moreover, that he was indebted to her in the sum of $60. And still further, the said gentleman tendered her a large sum, (how much she declined to say, but we have otherwise heard it was $500,) if she would furnish him the infant privately, as desired. This, she says, she refused to do, and the gentleman then inquired the name of the person in charge of the lying-in Ward, Mrs. Avis, and made a memorandum of it. It now seems more than very probable that the letter received by the nurse a few days afterwards was penned by person in the Cunningham mansion.

But, the difficulty going up the name of Mrs. Cunningham's "friend," or furnishing any description of him whatever, on the ground that she had promised to treat it as a matter of confidence and observe strict silence on the subject.

DR. CAYLE.

The Doctor is still detained at the Fifteenth Precinct Station-House, but is allowed all the liberty consistent with propriety. When we called there yesterday afternoon he had gone to take a turn in Washington-square in company with an officer.

Mr. Cayle is—as we have already stated, though sundry letters from physicians denied it to us yesterday—a member of the New-York Academy of Medicine. His name was presented for membership on the 20th of September, 1854, by Drs. C. L. Mitchell and David Reese, two respectable Brooklyn physicians. His admission took place on the 25th of October of the same year. Dr. Cayle, then, as now, lived at No. 232 Gold-street, Brooklyn. So say the minutes of the Secretary of the Academy. Whether his standing has been affected in the Society by his late brilliant course we shall soon see.

MRS. CUNNINGHAM'S CONFINEMENT.

Mrs. Cunningham, just before going into labor, she frankly acquainted us as to really got up severe pains, on the principle of the Frenchman in "First Night," allowing his daughter, when at rehearsal, she was to give an exhibition. But she seems to have contracted the ague, and has really been very unwell, with cholera symptoms. The dodge undoubtedly was in the first place to be genuine in her groans, and, in the next place, to satisfy physicians, if called in, that her "dragging" pains were really felt.

WAS HER PLAN A STUPID ONE?

Let us suppose that she had found two doctors willing to play together and swear the thing through. A child could easily be obtained and an after-birth, &c. Appearances to Mr. and Mrs. Wilt and the daughters of a genuine birth were very strong. Mrs. Barnes and Mrs. Bell were prepared to swear to the fact. The Doctors were regularly summoned and came. Previous appearances had been well feigned. The child was shown to friends and neighbors. In a week's time she would have recovered. All the minutiae of a real birth had been rehearsed, and nothing remained but to act in a Court of Justice the whole affair before a Jury.

WHAT MR. STAFFORD SAYS.

Wm. R. Stafford, Esq., has been associated with Mr. Graham and Judge Dean as counsel for Mrs. Cunningham. He was the last of the trio engaged, and promises to be the last to desert his client. He still has faith in Mrs. Cunningham, and means to fight her battle with all the energy and skill he is master of. Mrs. Cunningham had frequently spoken to him about her pregnancy, but never mentioned the precise time when she expected to be confined. She told him a few days ago that she was going to engage an old nurse of hers to attend upon the expected heir, and wait upon her through her sickness. He did not think that the birth would take place as soon as it did. That there was a birth he has no doubt. He takes the statements of Mrs. Cunningham as sufficient on this point. When he called at Mrs. C.'s house Tuesday forenoon, it was in reference to the suit of Hanman, the cook, to recover wages alleged to be due her. He found Mrs. C. very sick, and supposing the spoken of event was about to come off, he sent for Drs. Uhl and Smith. As his own professional services were not needed at such a crisis, he gracefully withdrew.

The first knowledge he had of any suspicion or charge against Mrs. Cunningham of an attempt to palm off somebody else's child as her own, was gathered from reading Tuesday's second edition of the Times. He feels confident that the whole matter will be cleared up favorably for his client. Mr. Stafford says the publication that he sought to intrude himself as counsel for Dr. Cayle is erroneous. Mr. Stafford was sick all day yesterday, with bilious colic, and did not go out of his house. Judge Dean, his partner, started, yesterday, for Washington, on business connected with the slaver Panchita. To-day, if well enough, Mrs. C.'s counsel will appear for her at the Jefferson Market Court.

MRS. BARNES, THE SISTER OF MRS CUNNINGHAM.

Our readers will remember among the affidavits taken before Justice Davison, on Tuesday, was one from Mrs. Ann Barnes. Among other things she testified that she had noticed the appearance of Mrs. C. when undressed, and that it did not differ from that of a woman in the family-way. She said she took the child from Dr. Uhl, at his request, to dress it, and the child had the appearance of a new-born infant. Much curiosity has been felt to know more of Mrs. Barnes, as in case the plot had not been interrupted she would have become a most important witness against the heirs of the Burdell estate, and in favor of the new comer. Of herself personally she said in her affidavit:

"I reside at No. 31 Bond-street; have lived at said house since the sale of the household furniture, which I think was about the first of April last. I am the sister of Mrs. Cunningham, and am a widow. My husband has been dead some eleven years. I have scarcely been out of the house, No. 31 Bond street, since I have been there. I am lame.

Though Mrs. Barnes has not been named until now in connection with the Burdell mystery, we find no difficulty in tracing her history. She has been twice married, her first husband dying suddenly, leaving four children to her care. Her second husband—Mr. Barnes, resided with her at Newark, N. J., and also died suddenly, leaving his three promising children to her, who are all still alive. In the Summer of 1850 the widow Barnes occupied a small house on "old Gowanus Lane," now a part of Fifth-avenue, Brooklyn. She was a member of, and a Sunday School teacher in, the Dean-street Methodist Church, of which Rev. S. H. Clark was pastor. Being poor, she was assisted in the support of her family by the Church. In the summer of that year one of the members of Church, a Mr. W., who then resided in Oxford street, and who resides in Brooklyn at the present time, but does business in Broadway in this City, prepared to go into the country with his family. Wishing some one to take charge of his house during his absence, and thinking to do a kindness to a sister in the Church, he applied to Mrs. Barnes, who gladly accepted the offer to make his house her home until the family returned. They were absent about three weeks, and when they returned, found that the house had been robbed of almost all the valuable portable articles in it. Wine, silver, china and glass-ware, table-spreads, napkins, sheets, pillow-cases, bed-spreads, even the beds themselves, had some of them been ripped open and a portion of the feathers taken out and carried off. Mrs. Barnes was in the house when they arrived, and welcomed Mrs. W. as if nothing unusual had happened. She soon left for home, and it was not till after her departure that the robbery was discovered.

When the fact was announced to Mrs. Barnes, she showed the greatest astonishment, and protested that it must have been done by the servant girl.

Complaint was made at the City Hall of the robbery, and an officer named Egan, accompanied by Mr. W., and the pastor of the Dean street Church, proceeded to search the residence of Mrs. Barnes. They were at first refused admittance, but finally succeeded in entering the house, Mrs. Barnes having, in the meantime, escaped by the back door.

Many of the missing articles were found and identified, and the remainder they were afterwards told were taken to a place designated in New-York.

Mrs. Barnes was arrested by officer Egan and put in the lock-up, but was soon let out on the responsibility of the officer who arrested her. She was expelled from the Dean street Church, and Mr. W. took no further steps in prosecution of the matter. Mrs. Barnes is a woman of small stature, about 40 years of age, has light eyes and hair, the latter inclined to gray. She lately walks very lame.

MR. LAIGHT.

The Mr. Laight referred to in the evidence of Miss Augusta Cunningham, as the party upon whom her mother was going to make a call Monday afternoon, has an office at No. 63 Water-street. He is a real estate agent. As to his business transactions with Mrs. Cunningham, he is not communicative.

DOCTOR UHL.

Was he justified in the course he took to expose the fabulous intentions of the mother of the bogus heir to Dr. Burdell? This question the physicians are canvassing all over the town with great earnestness. Dr. Uhl is a member of the family in "good and regular standing," he has long been before the New-York public, and his professional honor is no less distinguished in medical circles, than is his honesty as a man. But when he graduated, doubtless, he swore the Hypocratic Oath—the oath which bound him solemnly not to divulge the secrets confided to him by his patients, except under the most stringent demands of justice. Whether he has violated that oath in this case is the question. One party, and they are of the strictest sect, who hold the code of medical ethics to be of equally binding force with the Ten Commandments—who think, for instance, that for a physician to correct an error or make any statement over his own name in any other newspaper than an exclusively medical one, is a vile quackery, worthy of the severest denunciation—holds that the Doctor has violated the code, and should suffer the penalty of an expulsion from the Academy. The other party say that, not one out of twenty honest men would have been honest enough to do as Dr. Uhl did; he deserves a service of plate, a handsome testimonial, a general token of appreciation and approval from honest men in science, and the medical brethren in particular. His breach of Mrs. Cunningham's secret, thing which no professional oath obliged him to keep, though like the priest, who may not divulge the secrets of the Confessional, the physician must hold his patient's secrets sacred, unless the priest, whose superior must be in the place of a conscience to him, the physician has no superior to whom he can look for absolution, if he wounds truth and checks justice by locking in his own breast a secret which the patient had no business to make him a confident in. This party add that, if the Doctor was justified in imparting his patient's secret to the prosecuting officer, he was only doing an unpleasant duty when he consented to make the intended felony as apparent to the world as it was to his own mind; and so, in his complicity with the District-Attorney, he only did what a particularly upright man, or a great villain, would even consent to do. The following is the sentiment and proposition of one who is decidedly to be numbered in the latter class.

Testimonial to Dr. Uhl.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

May I be permitted to suggest that some method be taken to show the public estimation of the courageous position taken by Dr. Uhl in the recent Burdell Cunningham matters. Unquestionably the better proceeding on his part would have been to refuse any cooperation, and to threaten any persistance on her part in the proposed villany with exposure. Still, he did the next best thing, effecting the unveiling of the character of an iniquitous woman, and ultimately, perhaps, of the murderers of Dr. Burdell and the furtherance of the ends of justice and humanity.

Dr. Uhl may suffer peculiarly from the loss of patronage of some persons who may consider that his conduct was unprofessional, and may lose the treatment and pay from persons with diseases of which they are ashamed, and who, perhaps, might fear to trust him with their secrets.

Personally knowing Dr. Uhl, and that he is a man of honor and integrity, I trust that you will view the matter in this light and will receive subscriptions towards a proper testimonial, and towards which I am confident hundreds will gladly contribute; among others please me for the sum of $10.

VERITAS.

THE BOARD OF POLICE COMMISSIONERS.

Voting Continued—No Choice Yet—A Secret Caucus.

The Board of Police Commissioners met again yesterday morning, all the members present. As soon as the minutes of the previous meeting had been read, the Board took up the regular order of the day—the election of a Commissioner to fill the vacancy.

The Clerk recorded the 100th vote, which stood as follows:

Messrs. Nye, Bowen and Stranahan for E. D. Morgan.
Mayor Wood and Popell for Robert L. Stuart.
Mr. Cholwell for Erastus Brooks.

The result of each vote was the same until the 114th vote, when Mayor Wood remembered that the voting of the Board appeared to be mechanical. It might be very pleasant amusement for some gentlemen, but it was evident that the persons now in nomination could not unite a majority of the Board. He hoped therefore that they would make an effort to unite a majority of the Board upon some unexceptionable person.

Mr. Bowen suggested that Mr. Morgan was unexceptionable.

Mayor Wood said that while the personal character of both Mr. Morgan and Mr. Ward were without blemish, yet they were very prominently identified with a political party, and the politics of the other (Mr. Stuart) he was really unacquainted with, if he had any at all. He only made the suggestion, whether it would be well for them to continue voting, without the slightest prospect of coming to a conclusion.

Mr. Stranahan suggested that to prevent this mechanical voting becoming chronic, they had better adjourn a week or so.

Mayor Powell said if the vacancy could be filled from Brooklyn he was satisfied he could nominate a gentleman who would be unexceptionable to all.

Mr. Bowen said it was imperative to elect a man from this City.

Gen. Nye suggested that for the purpose of seeing whether they could unite upon a candidate they take a recess of twenty minutes.

The suggestion was acquiesced in, and the Board retired to consult in private.

When the twenty minutes had elapsed the roll was called and business commenced.

Mr. Bowen moved to refer all bills against the Board to the Finance Committee, which was carried.

Mr. Stranahan, on the general expenses of the Department, reported in favor of a proportionate division, which was carried.

He also reported on the claim of Sergeants acting as Inspectors, for pay as Inspectors. He thought it would be impolitic, and reported against the claim. The report was adopted.

The Board then adjourned to Friday at 12½ o'clock.

NEW-YORK, Thursday, Aug. 6, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

I propose that a meeting of citizens, irrespective of party, be held to express the sense of the community, and to exercise a pressure from the outside which shall bring faction to the bar of public opinion and cause the interests of the community to be respected.

VOX GREGIS.

A Policeman Sues Mayor Wood for his Pay.

FOURTH DISTRICT COURT.

Before Judge Ambrose.

James Durning, assignee, &c., vs. The Mayor, &c., of New-York.—The plaintiff in this case sues to recover $72 44, alleged to be due to Samuel T. Warts, for services rendered as a policeman from May 22 to June 22, 1857.

The minutes of the old Board of Police Commissioners were produced, showing the appointment of Mr. Warts on May 1, 1855, which were read in evidence. The plaintiff then called witnesses, who proved that Warts had been a policeman, and served as such up to July 3, 1856, at a salary of $700 per annum. They also proved the assignment of the claim to the plaintiff. The defendant's counsel moved to dismiss the complaint. The motion was denied, and an exception taken. The defendant's counsel then called Azariah C. Flagg, who testified that he was the Comptroller, and had charge of the Finances of the City; that $100,000 had been transferred from the City to the State Treasury to defray the expenses of the police for the year 1857, under the Metropolitan Police Act—that the same was transferred after the decision of the Court of Appeals. Defendant's counsel called James W. Nye, who testified that he was one of the Metropolitan Police Commissioners, and that the first meeting was held on the 23d day of April, 1857; also, that charges had been preferred against all the men who did not come over to the new Board, and they were dismissed.

Defendants' counsel renewed his motion to dismiss the complaint on the grounds—

1. That the plaintiff's assignor was not a public officer under these defendants, during the period for which he claims pay. 2. If he was a member of the old Metropolitan Police, upon the first organization of the new Board, he became a Metropolitan policeman. 3. The Charter of 1857 abolishes the police department of defendants. 4. Metropolitan policemen are State, not City officers. 5. Defendants have no control over the funds raised by the Legislature to pay policemen. 6. The funds are in the State Treasury, and subject to the draft of the Treasurer of the Police Commissioners. 7. If the plaintiff's assignor had not been legally discharged by the Metropolitan Commissioners, he has a right of action against them for his salary. Decision reserved.

For plaintiff, E. F. Smith; for defendants, A. S. Lawrence, Jr., Assistant Corporation Counsel.

THE SLAVE TRADE.

The Panchita Discharged—Curiously.

CASE OF THE SCHOONER N. HAND.

OFFICIAL DOCUMENTS.

The Relief Vessel to the Cape De Verds Turned Slaver.

Another startling chapter in the history of the Slave trade has just transpired in the shape of the following official correspondence between the British Consul at St. Vincents, Cape de Verd Islands, Lord Clarendon and Lord Napier. The occasion of the correspondence is the shameful discharge by the British Consul at St. Vincents, of the Spanish brigantine Panchita, which was boarded on the 11th of July, while anchored there upon the 11th of July, and which had been sent for the relief of the distressed inhabitants who at that time were suffering the horrors of famine, departed immediately thereafter to the Coast of Africa, and took on board, near Cabaga de Cobra, two hundred Africans for Cuba, or elsewhere, with which she got off without detection. The fact that the N. Hand was boarded off the Congo by H. B. M. ship Teazer under suspicious circumstances, and that she has never returned to New-York, is given as confirmatory of the suspicion that she was a Slaver. A letter to "Vianna" is referred to by the Consul at St. Vincents, which evidently implicated parties in New-York in connection with the transfer of the vessel. This letter, though transmitted to Lord Clarendon, is withheld in this published correspondence:

Memorandum by Lord Napier.

By registry at the Custom-House at New-York, the N. Hand, at the date of her voyage, June 9, 1856, was owned by George W. Roosevelt, shipwright, of that City.

A portion of her cargo, destined for the relief of the suffering population of the Cape de Verd Islands, was shipped on behalf of the Corn Exchange Company of New-York, by Mr. Peter Rice. Another portion was shipped by Juan C. Abeia Figaniere, and Figaniere, Ribeir & Co.

The vessel has not returned to New-York.

A strong appeal, on behalf of the Cape de Verd people, was made by the Portuguese Consul, and the alleged participation of that functionary in the slave-trade prompts the suspicion that he was concealing a nefarious design under the cloak of a charitable office.

Lord Clarendon to Lord Napier.

FOREIGN OFFICE, Feb. 16, 1857.

MY LORD: I transmit to your lordship herewith, copies of a despatch and of its inclosures from Mr. Mylne, Her Majesty's Consul at St. Vincents, containing information respecting an American vessel called the N. Hand, which entered, at the Cape Verd Islands in the month of August last, and was suspected of being about to engage in the slave trade.

I also inclose a despatch from Her Majesty's Commissioners at Loanda, stating that the vessel in question was boarded by Her Majesty's ship Teazer, off the Congo River, on the 27th of August, and that she is reported to have shortly afterwards shipped a cargo of slaves from Cabaga de Cobra, with which she got clear off.

Your lordship will learn from Mr. Mylne's dispatch that at the time of the entry of the N. Hand at the Custom-House at the Cape Verde she was declared as about to proceed to the neighboring Island of St. Jago, and from thence to the West Indies. But the dispatch from Her Majesty's Commissioners at Loanda proves that she was shortly afterwards found on the Coast of Africa by a British cruiser, when the master declared she was bound for Rio Janeiro, at which place, however, she never arrived.

Under these circumstances there can be little doubt that the report of the N. Hand having subsequently shipped a cargo of slaves from the Coast, is well founded, and I have to instruct your lordship to bring the above-mentioned information respecting the N. Hand to the knowledge of the United States authorities.

I am, with great truth and regard, my Lord,
Your lordship's most obedient humble servant,
CLARENDON.

BRITISH CONSULATE, ST. VINCENT, CAPE DE VERDE, July 28, 1856.

MY LORD: I beg to inclose a copy of a correspondence between the military commandant of this Island and myself, relative to the American brigantine N. Hand, Stevenson master; and owned by George W. Roosevelt. This vessel arrived here on the 11th inst. from New-York, bringing a quantity of food, sent to be gratuitously distributed to the poor inhabitants of these Islands. At the time of entering this vessel at the Custom House, it was declared that she would proceed to the neighboring Island of Saint Jago, and from thence to the West Indies.

In consequence of certain expressions used by the master, and which were repeated to me, I consider it my duty to direct the attention of the authorities of this place, to the suspicious nature of the circumstances connected with this vessel. The said master of her had openly declared that he had manacles concealed on board; that the declaration concerning the vessel's destination was a false one, as it was not their intention to touch at the Island of St. Jago, or to proceed to the West Indies; that there was all the water on board for the Slave voyage.

The result of my communication to the military commandant, was the official letter, of which I transmit herewith a translation, wherein that authority states, after searching the vessel, the cargo found on board was in conformity with the manifest signed and sealed by the Consul-General of Portugal, at New-York; and that the crew of the said vessel were all American citizens except one.

Notwithstanding, no doubt exists in my mind that this vessel is engaged in a slave trading voyage. She has fifty six pipes of water on board; her crew, with the exception of two persons, do not speak the English language; there is a Portuguese supercargo on board, and the vessel is, evidently, a very swift sailer; and further, she has a very large quantity of provisions—besides those intended for the Islands, taking for granted that the assertion of the master, "that she was not going to St. Jago," as true—proper for feeding negroes.

As I am informed that another vessel, expected shortly, to bring a further quantity of food, as a donation for the distressed inhabitants of these Islands, is intended for a similar expedition in the S. T., I beg to suggest for your Lordship's consideration whether it is not advisable that H. M's ships about to join the W. C. of Africa squadron should be directed to touch at this Island on their way out.

Unfortunately the circumstances concerning the N. Hand only came to my knowledge a few hours after the departure from this Port of H. M. ship Merlin, which vessel sailed from hence on the 18th inst., and therefore that opportunity was lost of sending on the information to H. M.'s cruisers on the coast of Africa.

I have, &c., (Signed,)
THOMAS MILLER, H. B. M. Consul.

To the Earl of Clarendon, K. G., &c., &c.

The Consul to Major Machado.

BRITISH CONSULATE, ST. VINCENT, Cape de Verde, July 18, 1856.

SIR: I have just received such information, relative to the American brigantine N. Hand, at the present time anchored at this port, as creates a strong suspicion that she is about to proceed hence on a voyage in the Slave-trade.

It is stated to me that the master of the said brigantine, while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, boasted that "he had manacles concealed on board where he only could find them; that the vessel was not going to the Island of St. Jago to discharge the rest of the cargo, nor afterward to the West Indies, as had been declared upon entry at the Custom-House; that she had all the water necessary for the Slave voyage on board; that the only persons who could speak English on board were himself and steward."

As the vessel actually has on board a much larger quantity of water than her crew could possibly require, and as I am informed that the crew are Spanish, the supercargo is a Portuguese, and the captain the only American on board, these circumstances tend to strengthen the suspicion excited by the expressions of the captain, and I consider it my duty to convey the foregoing information to you that the necessary measures may be adopted to discover the truth in this case.

I have, &c.,
(Signed) THOS. MILLER, H. B. M's Consul.

To Major Jose Paula Machado, Military Com'nd't.

Machado's Reply.

At 6 o'clock in the evening of the 18th inst., I received your official letter dated on that day, relative to the American brigantine N. Hand, at present at anchor in this port. In reply I have to state, that in consequence of its contents the competent authorities of this Island proceeded to make an examination on board the said brigantine; and the result was that they found that the cargo which remained on board, together with that which had been discharged into the Custom-House, agreed with the manifest, sealed and signed by the Portuguese Consul at New-York. I have also to inform you that the Vice Consul for the United States of America has declared that the crew of the said brigantine were all American citizens with the exception of one.

(Signed) JOSE PAULA MACHADO.

July 18, 1856. Comm'nt Inspector.

To Her Britannic Majesty's Consul, Cape de Verde.

Report by Commander of the Teazer.

LOANDA, July 26, 1856.

MY LORD: L. Her Majesty's ship Teazer, having met with and boarded, off the Congo, not far from the Cabaca de Cobra, an American brigantine under very suspicious circumstances, on the 27th of last August, we deem it right to bring them under your Lordship's notice, with a view to such measures as your Lordship may think proper to make on the subject, which you may think proper to make on the subject to the United States Government.

2. The vessel, which was a very fast one of 400 tons through measurement, had on board 1,000 barrels of rice, 2,000 barrels of corn meal, (the residue of the original stock shipped,) 56 water casks and two tanks. She had a crew of eight sailors, not one of whom could answer to his name when mustered by the crew-list. She was lost sight of by the Teazer in the night, and has never, it is stated, been seen since, nor appeared at Sangorla. Report says she took off 900 slaves from Cabaga de Cobra, which agrees with the statement made by H. M. brig-of-war False Flor, then cruising off the Congo, whose commander wrote word some weeks ago that a shipment was effected about that time and place.

The Case of the Panchita.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT—AUG. 6.

Before Judge Betts.

The motion to set aside the attachment against the Panchita for irregularity and to discharge the vessel from arrest came on this morning.

The facts out of which the motion arose are briefly as follows: The return day of the process was July 23, but the government, from some reason or other, it is said because the Marshal had forgotten to publish the notice, as required by law, desired the date to be altered to Aug. 6, which was done not by the Judge, the clerk, or a deputy, but by some person employed in the clerk's office.

Affidavits setting forth these facts were introduced by the counsel for the claimants, and one by Mr. Joaquinessa, stating that the charge was made in good faith.

The Court then made the following order:

At a stated term of the District Court of the United States of America, for the Southern District of New-York, held at the City Hall in the City of New-York, on Thursday, the 6th day of August, in the year of our Lord 1857—Present: The Honorable Samuel R. Betts, District Judge.

The United States vs. The Bark Panchita.—This case having been heard on a motion to set aside attachment for irregularity and discharge the vessel from arrest, and argument by the advocates for the respective parties, and due deliberation being had in the premises, it is now ordered, adjudged and decreed, by the Court, that the motion and attachment issued in this cause be set aside because of an unauthorized alteration of the return day of said process after the same had been duly served on the said vessel.

It seems to be somewhat of a question whether it is the effect of this order to discharge the Panchita altogether from custody. Probably it was not intended to have this effect, as it was evidently a mistake on the part of the District-Attorney.

[FROM THE REPORTER FOR THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Aug. 6.

Great Britain has not yet replied to the communication of the State Department, written several months ago, relative to Central American affairs, in connection with the rejected treaty.

The claims for consequential damages will not be enforced by our Government against New-Granada, which, however, through its Minister, has expressed its willingness to allow such as were actually sustained by our citizens, owing to the Panama riots. No difficulty is apprehended as to agreeing upon a mutually agreeable basis of settlement of the pending questions between the two Governments. General Herran was to have had another interview with Gen Cass to-day.

In no event will the Administration permit Costa Rica or any other Central American State to diminish the geographical boundaries of Nicaragua, or divide or absorb the Territory; and of this fact they are probably by this time aware.

There is no question between this and any other Country that does not promise a quiet and satisfactory settlement.

The Shawnee (Kansas) Indians, having made their selections and locations of the 200,000 acres, in accordance with the terms of the treaty between them and the United States, nothing now remains but the approval of the selections by the President, before the residue of the Shawnee lands will be opened to sale and preemption. In view of this condition of things, the Commissioner of the General Land Office will shortly issue instructions to the Surveyor-General of Kansas to approve the plats and surveys, and transmit them to the proper Land Offices. The claims of the white settlers who have already gone upon those lands will not be recognized.

The members of the Cabinet, at a meeting this morning, adopted an order to close the Department to-morrow as a token of respect to Mr. Dobbin.

New-Orleans papers of Friday of last week are to hand, but they contain no news of importance.

PARIS GOSSIP.

[illegible] in France—Representation of the American Minister—Maritime Law—Bonaparte's Movement in Paris in Choice—The Italian Conspiracy.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times:

PARIS, Thursday, July 23, 1857.

On Thursday afternoon last, by a sort of coincidence, while BERANGER was bidding adieu to his friends of this life, the last work of his late intimate friend DAVID D'ANGERS was being mounted on its pedestal in the court of the School of Medicine, in the midst of the noisy rejoicings of a crowd of distinguished men of science and letters.

The last work of the eminent sculptor and stern republican, DAVID D'ANGERS, was a statue of BICHAT, the illustrious physiologist and anatomist, in bronze. Thursday last was appointed by the Minister of Public Instruction as the day of Inauguration of this statue. The Minister presided on the occasion and delivered a discourse; DU ARMAND EXTROU, for the Medical Congress, by whom the statue was presented to the Faculty of Paris, responded in his eloquent speech; which, by the Medical Gazette, and in such an assemblage as the court of the School of Medicine, the home of the Latin quarter and of free thought and free speech, excited the loudest and most tumultuous applause. Dantan PARE BUSSON, Dean of the Faculty of Medicine, spoke for the Faculty; Dr. BARON LARREY spoke for the Army and Navy; Professor FLOURENS for the Institute of France; and, Professor BOUILLAUD delivered the oration on the life and published services of BICHAT.

The name of BICHAT is far from being unknown to the public. His name recalls at once a brilliant and a melancholy destiny. BICHAT was born in 1771, and died in 1802, at the age of 31. Yet in that short time he conquered for himself an imperishable name in the annals of medicine, even at an epoch when the science of medicine numbered among its adepts in France some of the brightest names enrolled on its long catalogue of brilliant illustrations.

It is not the place here to write an obituary notice of BICHAT. But the tragical manner of his death may interest the general reader. Nothing could moderate the laborious ardor of BICHAT. In all seasons, even during the greatest heat of Summer, he was always found occupied in his laboratory, or in the wards of the hospital Hotel Dieu, where he breathed a putrid and infectious air, filled with infected and deleterious effluvia. In the month of July, 1802, he was occupied in observing the progress of putrefaction of the skin, when an infected odor, which arose from the vase containing the putrid skin, was in course of maceration, drove all the assistants away. BICHAT alone had the courage, or rather the temerity, to persist his investigations, exposed to these dangerous emanations. The same day, by a kind of startling fatality, an accident supervened to develop what otherwise might have passed without serious results. In descending the stairs of the Hotel Dieu he fell, and the commotion which followed caused him to lose consciousness for several minutes. He gained his residence with difficulty, passed the night tolerably comfortable, but the ninth day he suffered from a violent headache. Yet he believed he could continue his labors and make his visit to his hospital patients as usual. The extreme fatigue he experienced caused him to faint, and he was obliged to take to his bed. The symptoms rapidly became alarming, and prove distressing, and he died the 31st of July, 1802, after fourteen days' illness.

The two great works which contributed most to immortalize the name of BICHAT are his Treatise on Anatomy and his Researches on Life and Death, both standard works in France to this day, and read by the youth of the schools with enthusiasm and zeal.

The work of DAVID D'ANGERS is susceptible of criticism. The greatest admirers of this artist attribute to him one fault, that of placing under a magnificent, a superb head, a ridiculous body. It is precisely this fault that serves one in the statue of BICHAT. Other fault is very up to the best works of the great sculptor, viz: body is a caricature. BICHAT stands with the arms folded on his breast, and behind is extended a cadaver, ready for the dissecting knife. The statue is mounted on a marble pedestal of an elevation of four or five feet, and is placed under the peristyle in front of the grand lecture room.

It is thus that France honors her great men!

The American Minister at Paris has, I learn, addressed the French Government on the subject of the almost prohibited in France on emigrants in transit to the United States. This action of the American Minister was, I believe, instigated principally by the representations of Mr. ROBERT MURRAY, of New-York, lately sent out here by the Emigrant Society of New-York, to examine into this subject. I do not know that I am violating any secret in thus placing in print what has only come to my ears in an isolated way; but it seems that a subject of such general importance, upon which there could be no division of opinion, has no special need of that secrecy which belongs to conducted questions. I will venture to repeat, therefore, what I have heard, that the document addressed by our Minister to the French Cabinet was a lengthy and able exposé of the abuses and the evils of the system that are practiced in France, and enclosed in the most energetic terms an abolition of these abuses. To this document the French Cabinet returned immediately returned an answer to the effect that, not only had some laws already been passed to stop the abuses complained of, but that, fully recognizing the justice of the American Minister's representations, they would take pleasure in leading themselves to further reforms in this particular. We may, therefore, soon hope to see a radical reform in this crying abuse.

Mr. BUCHANAN has gone on to Switzerland and Germany with the view of instigating repressive measures on the part of the other governments in the same cause. His mission ought to have the good wishes of every philanthropist, for there is no more abominable traffic than the abuses that are practiced upon the poor European emigrants.

It is true that all the governments of Europe to which the amendment of the late Mr. MARCY to the maritime treaty of Paris had been submitted, have been notified that Mr. BUCHANAN does not wish the proposition carried for her. This step of the American Government is to be regretted, since the amendment of Mr. MARCY would soon have been universally adopted, and the United States would have acquired the honor of having introduced into the law of nations the greatest step in the civilization and christianization of mankind which the nineteenth century has yet seen. The present Government at Washington has no doubt yielded to the sentiment of the masses which asserts that the United States can whip all creation, and that a war is necessary somewhere, to establish the national prestige. This sentiment is interpreted in a total abnegation of the subject and semi-barbarous principle upon which privateering is founded; and since the principle of Mr. MARCY's amendment must eventually prevail, it will not redound to the honor of an administration which withdrew the proposition at a moment when all the nations had the pen in hand ready to sign it. It is true that England still withheld her signature; but Lord PALMERSTON had promised an acquiescence a few months ago at Liverpool, and if the American Government had held nothing, would have been forced by the commercial interests of the country to have signed it.

The Government seems to wish to continue to direct public opinion in regard to BERANGER. The Emperor would like to take all the mourning and all the respect out of the people's hands and usurp it for himself. Thus he assumed the funeral ceremonies upon the Government, and now it is announced that he intends to demand from the treasury a sum sufficient to erect at Père la Chaise a magnificent monument to his memory,—a monument designed to perpetuate the fact that the Government did monopolize all the sympathy for the illustrious dead. But this will not be the first stone guilty of perpetuating a base libel to posterity.

Yesterday the Moniteur threw the Bourse into agitation by the announcement of the complot against the Emperor's life, lately discovered, with the names of the conspirators. The facts were already known, but an official notice from the Government always adds gravity to the affair, and thus it was in this instance. It looked more the less odd, however, to see the names of MAZZINI and LEDRU ROLLIN, about to be brought before the French tribunals on a trial for a conspiracy, and they both in England.

State Teachers' Association.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

BINGHAMTON, Tuesday, Aug. 4, 1857.

Binghamton is overflowing with teachers. Trains come in from the East, West, North and South heavily freighted with the elect of the schools; and judging from appearances, one would say that the schoolmaster was abroad in every other part of the State and only at home here. And, in truth, a pleasanter village could not have been selected for the meeting of the Teachers' Association, nor one where it would have found a more cordial and generous hospitality. The people open their halls, their hearts and their houses—and they are obliged to open the latter pretty wide, too; together with granting the use of carriages and horses, out of school house, to the two hundred teachers who have already assembled from various sections of the State.

The Convention was opened at 10 A. M. at Bingham Hall, by a prayer from Rev. E. N. STIMSON, of Binghamton; after which a cordial welcome was extended to the Association, on behalf of the citizens, by BENJAMIN TOWNSEND, Esq.; as the absence of Hon. DANIEL S. DICKINSON, who had been designated to that office, Mr. TOWNSEND pleasantly regretted, being called on at a moment's notice, to come leaping in the shadow of the Mr. Secretary of State, but extended a hearty welcome, and pungently reminded the members that the people of Binghamton were exceeding in their hospitality, and would not be satisfied with the shreds and tatters of worn-out thoughts, but demanded the fruits of a ripened experience.

The opening address on the Present Condition and Future Duty of the Association, was delivered by E. W. VALENTINE, Esq., President of the body. He reviewed the progress of the enterprise from the time when, in 1845, a few teachers traveled up the Erie Canal to attend the first meeting, to the present time, when it had grown into an institution; recapitulated in a long list of statistics, ending with the much quoted "Hasselius," whom, he averred, notwithstanding his recent garroting, never stood higher in reputation than now by all who knew him, the pecuniary advantages it had obtained for the teachers; and strongly urged the necessity of its speedy incorporation. In respect to the proceedings of the meeting, they must not degenerate into a mutual admiration society, neither should they indulge in personalities only admissible in the halls of Congress. Men, as in Southern plantations, used to absolute sway, were prone to exercise the same disposition here. He pointed the prudent middle ground which the Association had preserved in all the vexed questions of the day, and recommended a continuance of the same policy. In conclusion, he made a vigorous onslaught on the inadequate provision made by New-York for her schools, compared with the liberal provision of Massachusetts, Ohio, and other States, and recommended that they should ask an appropriation from the Legislature. There were twenty thousand native born children in the State who could neither read nor write; there was but one State Normal School for the twenty thousand teachers; and the School Commissioners were paid salaries about equivalent to the wages of a good mechanic. He also wanted the Department of Public Instruction completely remodeled; half the duties of the present Chief assigned over to the county judges, and the other half to clerks; and himself set free to watchover the state of schools in general, as well as of the Indian Schools in particular, which alone he was now legally bound to do. New York owed it to herself to aid in perfecting and carrying out a system that should educate all her sons and daughters.

An hour's discussion then ensued on the relative propriety of thanking the speakers before the addresses, to save time and feelings; of thanking them afterwards as a sop to the lazy; and of not thanking them at all, as a sop to interest and attention, as a common sense point of view; together with the expediency of leaving the publication of the speeches to the editorial corps of their organ, the New-York Teacher. But the knotty points were not unloosed, and the motions were finally laid on the table, after which the meeting adjourned.

At 2 P. M. the Convention assembled again with a considerable accession of numbers, many teachers having come in from the neighboring counties. Rev. A. D. MATO of Albany, delivered a finely written and interesting address on "New-York and her Common Schools." New-York, he said, was destined to a high rank among the States. Her great territory, manufactures, commerce, her progress during the last sixty-eight years, all pointed to this. Already had a New-Yorker a marked individuality, separating him from other men. Even the existence of the great cities bespoke a conscious power, a gigantic development of intellect. The children of the state were the heirs to this power—what should it do to train them to receive it? He compared the compulsory education of Prussia—a civilized despotism, which was the best tyranny on the planet—with the education we hoped from our Common Schools. But it was the duty of every friend of education to tell New-York that her star had not yet arisen—even our spunky little sis er, Massachusetts, did more to educate every juvenile Yankee within its limits. The State had outgrown nearly all its present institutions, and a great State water-logged with popular ignorance was no pleasant sight either to God or man. There were over 20,000 voters who could neither read nor write, and 20,000 was a large majority; this fact must puzzle a good many who believe that the voice of the people is the voice of God.

The two worst paid professions in the country were the teachers and the clergy. The clergy of our State received, on an average, $400 per annum. The male teachers of our Common Schools received an average of $60 per annum above the wages of a mechanic; the female teachers of $10 above the wages of a servant girl in the kitchen. Let no man censure their teaching, then, while the State refuses them adequate means of culture and then affixes the mark of pecuniary inferiority.

He strongly deprecated the unequal educational advantages of women, and the practice of paying them half price salaries. If any educator deserved the best compensation, that educator was the school mistress. Neither was it consistent to leave the whole management of School Committees to that sex which was, comparatively, a stranger to childhood.

Mr. MATO closed by a graphic sketch of a model teacher and an appeal to the members present to make their lives the realization of their theories.

Miss SUSAN B. ANTHONY, of Rochester, then offered a series of resolutions, condemning the exclusion of colored children from our Public Schools and Colleges; the expulsion of Miss LATIMER, delegate from Saratoga County, from the State Normal School, when, after six months of successful scholarship, it was discovered that colored blood coursed through her veins; the omission of any provision for the attendance of the teachers and pupils of the colored schools at THALBERG's concerts in New-York; and the exclusion of two young lady graduates of the Colored Normal School of New-York, from the Diploma Presentation in the Academy of Music, and affirming that these things were the natural outgrowths of the decision of Judge TANEY, that black men have no rights which white men are bound to respect. These resolutions elicited a most animated and spicy discussion, some moving their immediate adoption and others endeavoring to quash them by laying them on the table, the majority being, apparently, in their favor. After a long debate, which called out some interesting "points of order," the resolutions were finally referred to a Committee, and the meeting adjourned until evening.

Professor HENRY FOWLER, of Rochester University, was the speaker of the evening, and I regret that I am not permitted to give a sketch of his admirable lecture on the Labor of the Hands, Head and Heart. It was filled with good points and was well received by a large audience, for the hall was filled to overflowing. After a song from WM. N. REID and others, the meeting adjourned until to-morrow morning.

LOST RAILROAD TICKETS.—The Court of Cuyahoga County has recently decided that a passenger who loses his ticket cannot require a Railroad Company to pass him over their road without purchasing another. The ground for the decision is that the ticket being negotiable by delivery, any one picking up the lost ticket could ride upon it, and hence the Company would be subjected to frequent impositions. In this case it was held, too, that the Company have a right to make all reasonable rules and regulations for the benefit of the public and their own protection, and that the Ticket Agent, having sold a ticket to the plaintiff, the latter was obliged, if he rode, to give it to the conductor; if not, they had the right to eject him from the cars. Further, it was held that passengers are not lessees of the cars, on the purchase and delivery of tickets; but even then may be ejected for non-compliance with the regulations. The Company, in such a case, however, may be liable for breach of duty as common carriers, and for damage resulting from detention or otherwise.

ASSAULT UPON AN EDITOR.—THE ASSAULTER DANGEROUSLY STABBED.—The editor of the Lowell Tyrant, a small weekly paper, having recently, says a correspondent of the Boston Herald, inserted an article attacking the widowed sister of Mr. Wm. WARNER, sister, of that city, Mr. WARNER undertook to personally chastise the editor at his office. The latter, during the mêlée, drew a dirk and stabbed his opponent twice, once in the leg, and once in the abdomen. The latter wound, it is feared, is dangerous.

NEW-YORK CITY.

City Inspector Morton's Report on the Streets.

CITY INSPECTOR'S DEPARTMENT,
New-York, Aug. 5, 1857.

To the Honorable the Common Council:

GENTLEMEN: Under the provisions of the amended Charter of 1857, the performance of the work of street-cleaning came under the authority of this Department, and on the 1st day of May, the time when the new Charter went into effect, entering upon the discharge of the duties thus devolved, I found that upon the 19th day of March prior, Mr. EMERSON, then Commissioner of Streets and Lamps, had advertised for proposals for the performance of the work in question; that he had awarded the statement of bids received, and returning the lowest bidder to the Common Council for confirmation; that, although his action had been taken by the Common Council, temporary agreements, in my opinion not binding on the parties as a legal obligation, had been entered into by the Mayor, Comptroller, and Commissioner of Streets and Lamps, with these persons mentioned, as lowest bidders.

The history of these transactions has yet to be written, and will, I think, show a commendable anxiety on the part of his Honor, the Mayor, to complete the arrangements, as his more recent effort embraced in the characteristic, periodical and spasmodical reform message, emanating from the same authority.

These agreements were termed by his Honor, the Mayor, as "permission" to enter upon the work, while, by the Comptroller, they were regarded as contracts to all intents and purposes, and by both appear to have been so treated, a course which I continued in relation to their annulment for non-performance of the work, although the payments, if not regularly made, were certainly regular on the part of the Corporation, as is usual, than the exactness of the work, according to agreement by other parties.

On examination of these "permits" or contracts, it was found that one WILLIAM R. REYNOLDS had obtained the "permission" for thirteen Wards, and was to be paid as follows:

Ward.	Per cubic yard, or every 100 cubic feet.
First	$10 000
Second	1,200
Third	8,750
Fourth	8,800
Fifth	7,500
Sixth	9,250
Eighth	8,750
Ninth	8,250
Fourteenth	10 500
Fifteenth	7,900
Seventeenth	12,000
Twentieth and 23d	13,500
Total for 13 Wards	$111,450

Ten per cent. being deducted from each pay, to be retained.

The remaining wards were given to several other persons, all of whom, while some fully complied with the requirements to clean their wards twice a week, yet their wards were not in a condition to endanger the public health, as was the case in every one of the wards above-mentioned, and for the "cleaning" (?) of which several payments, amounting to over $11,000 had been made, with the assent of his Honor the Mayor, as given by his signature to the drafts.

Every citizen will remember that in the month of May, the filthy condition of the streets, and especially of Wards above referred to, was a cause of universal and just complaint; that the filth had been allowed to accumulate until it was feared that a pestilence would be originated, many years that death had been made on the Treasury for this cleaning, under what I deem may be called the "permission" of his Honor the Mayor. Feeling disposed to give all parties a fair trial, when the first bills for the work, due after the 1st of May was presented to me for approval—it had previously been approved to that date by Mr. EMERSON—I gave a sanction to the payment in words to this effect: "I hereby certify that since the work of Street cleaning (May 1, 1857,) has come under my official charge, the whole and the extent of work in arrears has, to an extent, prevented the fulfillment of the specifications, and would be such as to justify the payment of this bill to date."—May 8, 1857.

Immediately after, (the money following,) urged by the multitude of complaints made in person, by letters and petitions, from almost every section of the City, a communication was addressed to each contractor, giving notice, as follows:

CITY INSPECTOR'S DEPARTMENT,
New-York, May 11, 1857.

GENTLEMEN: The work of cleaning the streets of certain Wards, and which has been under your charge to perform for some six weeks past, has not been rendered as per specification, and although I am aware of the difficulties of performing the work, and the effect the weather has exerted in prevention of its execution, yet satisfied that more can be effected in the same time than has been at any corresponding period to this date, and believing the necessity to demand greater exertion to be made to place the City in a cleanly condition, I deem it but proper to notify you, at this time, that unless such greater exertion be made to conform to the specifications, I shall not feel justified in approving next and future payments of bills for said work, and which otherwise would be at once a pleasure and a duty, desirous as I am of assisting you in your labors. Yours, &c.,

G. W. MORTON, City Inspector.

Instead of such increased efforts in all of the Wards mentioned as being under the contract of Mr. REYNOLDS, the filth rapidly accumulated, and even the ash cartmen refused to work for the contractors in consequence of alleged embarrassments, and long rows of boxes, barrels and every description of utensil was arrayed along the side walks, containing ashes and garbage, while remonstrances, petitions, &c., came in from every direction in regard to the condition of the streets.

Communications were addressed to the Common Council on the subject of conforming the contracts so that they might be legally enforced, but such action was not taken. Despairing of the work under the "permission," at last, and to stop further demands upon the Treasury, notice was given to Mr. W. R. REYNOLDS that I should no longer recognize his right to perform such work or sanction drafts for the same.

It is proper here to observe that the assertion of his Honor, "I gave my consent to the cancellation only upon condition that that officer (meaning the City Inspector,) would forthwith advertise for bids, and make new contracts according to law," is incorrect; the consent of the Mayor was not given to the "cancellation," and I much doubt if it would have been given under any consideration; at all events, the papers served on Mr. REYNOLDS contained only the signature of the City Inspector. I did not deem myself empowered to go further than this without directions given by the Common Council, although fearfully apprehensive of danger to the public health, yet aware that any improper action would probably be taken advantage of by interested parties to involve the Corporation in a litigation for damages, &c., and the more so since I could not anticipate support from other branches of this municipal Government. Events have fully, to my own mind, justified my cautious and careful action.

The Common Council subsequently adopted the following, with other resolutions:

Resolved, That the Common Council hereby direct and authorize the City Inspector to thoroughly clean the streets of the City forthwith.

Resolved, That the City Inspector be and he is hereby directed to advertise for proposals for cleaning the streets of the City of New-York, the same to be done by contract in such districts and under such specifications as may be directed by the Common Council; the bids to be for one year, and also in separate bids for five years. The Common Council reserving the right to reject all or any of the estimates, if deemed for the interests of the Corporation.

Resolved, That a Committee of conference be appointed, to consist of three members from each Board, whose duty it shall be to prepare an ordinance distributing the City and preparing the specifications by which the City Inspector shall have the streets hereafter cleaned by contract.

These resolutions received a unanimous vote, over fifty voting in the Board of Councilmen, and twenty of the twenty-two members of the Board of Aldermen in the affirmative, and hence, in my opinion, giving the authority for the performance of the work as provided in section 39 of the Charter, which says:

"Whenever any work is necessary to be done to complete or perfect a particular job, or any supply is needful for any particular purpose, which work and job is to be undertaken or supply furnished for the Corporation, and the several parts of the said work or supply shall together involve the expenditure of more than two hundred and fifty dollars, the same shall be by contract, under such regulations concerning it, as shall be established by ordinance of the Common Council, unless by a vote of three-fourths of the members elected to each Board, it shall be ordered otherwise.

In consequence of his Honor, the Mayor, neither signing nor returning these resolutions to the Board, where they originated, with objections, the work was, to my regret, but doubtless to the satisfaction of other parties, delayed until I could obtain the advice of legal counsel as to my proceedings. In these resolutions the City Inspector was directed to continue the work until the proposed contracts should be "opened, awarded and confirmed," and in reply to the inquiry as to my duty to advertise immediately, or to await the preparation of specifications, the following answer was received from the counsel to the Corporation, RICHARD BUSTEED, Esq.:

"In answer to that part of your fourth question, which inquires whether you are to delay to advertise until the Common Council shall have prepared specifications, I am of opinion that if you rely on the authority to proceed upon the resolutions submitted to me in your communication of the 30th inst., you must wait."

The 39th section of the Charter quoted above, continues as follows: "* * * And all such contracts when given shall be given to the lowest bidder, the terms of whose contract shall be settled by the Corporation Counsel, as an act of preliminary specification to the bid or proposal."

Thus it will be seen that before this department can advertise for proposals, it is required that the Common Council shall prepare the specifications, and that the same shall be perfected by the counsel to the Corporation, as an act of preliminary to the bid or proposal.

The Committee on Conference reported to the Board of Aldermen on the 9th of July last past, and being adopted, the same were sent to the Board of Councilmen, where they have been made a special order for the meeting of this date.

On the 26th of June a communication was sent to both Boards of the Common Council, calling attention to the importance to a systematic execution of the work, and, if to be done by contract, that the specifications be speedily prepared and submitted to the Counsel to the Corporation.

With this statement, I am contrasted to judge as to my duty to make new contracts.

Citizens reasonably have a right to expect clean streets—and that although the work may be costly, yet that it shall be rendered with a due regard to economy. With reference to the first, I deem it most desirable to have a system of cleaning, and not as heretofore, by framing specifications and contracts never intended to be fulfilled, to have the tax-paying community robbed under a pretence of work. The whole contract system, however to the adoption and advantage of a few, I am fully convinced the case of outrageous fraud, and whatever specifications may be prepared for this department in work of this nature, it shall be my endeavor to enforce to the letter, so that appears to me to be the only way to break up a system of swindling. With this understanding, before making the proposals, it will afford me pleasure to comply with the Ordinance of the Common Council, and, as the law directs, complete contracts with the lowest bidder with adequate security.

It is well for our citizens that his Honor the Mayor can say, "It was supposed that we had reached the utmost extent to which official incompetence or penitency could go—and I find there is yet a lower depth," but must regret that such an acknowledgment should be forced from the Chief Magistrate of the great and prosperous City of New-York,—a City in which I feel a native pride and life-abiding interest—personal as well as from my official station.

To the questions "Are the streets in any better condition, and has the Corporation saved anything by changing the mode of street cleaning?" his Honor, with, I presume, a proper regard to his reputation for truth and veracity, replies "Must be answered in the negative."

To the first I would say, ask the residents of the wards who, in May last, were so loudly complaining and refer to the statement of the work done in these wards, appended to this communication, showing the results from May 29 to July 25, 1857.

LOADS REMOVED FROM THE FIRST, SECOND, THIRD, FOURTH, FIFTH, SIXTH, EIGHTH, NINTH, FOURTEENTH, FIFTEENTH, SEVENTEENTH, TWENTIETH AND TWENTY SECOND WARDS;

	Dirt.	Manure.	Ashes.	Total.
May 29 to June 13	3,264	240	14,256	17,760
June 13 to June 27	5,880	3,040	11,218	20,138
June 27 to July 11	12,492	7,567	9,065	29,024
July 11 to July 25	10,604	6,800	8,686	26,090
Total	32,197	20,679	41,225	94,101

It is very evident that these ninety-eight thousand three hundred and ninety one loads of dirt, ashes and manure, garbage and filth would not have been removed without "improvement," and that if accomplished with a reasonable amount of cost, after "permitting" the filth to accumulate through a period of eight months, to be removed in the Spring and Summer months, that to take the cost of one day's work to estimate the annual cost is scarcely a fair assumption, and no person who was not an adept at the fashionable art of figures could arrive at a satisfactory result thereby. The maxim that "figures will not lie," is one old and honored, and even if forced to arrive at a result, it can scarcely have certainty itself against the developments and test of time, verifying, "Truth crushed to earth will rise again."

Neither, after the lapse of eight months of neglect to clean, is it fair to estimate the cost of cleaning thirteen dangerously filthy Wards, even for two weeks, as a just comparison with others of the twenty-two, which, if not thoroughly, have been partially cleaned, nor yet to make a supposition of expenditure of seventy five thousand dollars for ashes, dirt, &c., from the City—a work that will cost probably not exceeding $20,000 at the greatest amount.

The whole amount of requisitions, other than for the work approved by Mr. KELLING, as above, to May 9, drawn by this department to date, is $39,692 83, and of all bills due the whole amount for the quarter to June 1, will be less to the amount, including the $12,000 for the work done the two weeks ending July 11, than $60,000, bonds and every item of expense included for the cleaning of the whole City, both Wards under contract and otherwise. If this can be estimated for the year, it will be perceived the cost will not exceed $240,000, against the expenditure heretofore of over $400,000 for work said to have been, and pretended to have been, rendered. How well has such fair economy been performed for the past two weeks, and what the cost, I will leave it for the citizens generally to judge. The amount expended during the first four months of 1854, 55, 56 and '57 have been, according to the Comptroller's books, as follows:

1854	$191,586 28	1856	$245,315 68
1855	158,977 83	1857	197,397 10

The condition of the City in 1854 was similar in filthiness to the past months of the present year, and the work of street cleaning was finished weeks previous to under the direction of the then City Inspector, and the number of loads removed having been 185,549, at a cost of $200,158 64. It is still to be noticed that the cost for the first six months of that year was less than the two succeeding years, as is also the cost for the last of the present year. It is also noticeable that after the work was resumed by the proper department, in the same year, the cholera originated in Baxter-street (then Orange street) during the month of May, and that twenty-five hundred and nine deaths resulted from the disease, most probably originating in the neglect to enforce and maintain the cleanly condition of the City, and especially in the above-mentioned locality. Can any estimate be formed of the pecuniary loss to our City in its trade? Is it imprudent to maintain the present cleanly condition of the City? Let the following important statement answer:

Statement of deaths during the corresponding weeks, from May to August, in the years 1854, '55, 56, '57:

Week ending	1857.	1856.	1855.	1854.
May 9	392	364	431	434
May 16	430	362	457	394
May 23	393	399	394	359
May 30	465	387	399	415
June 6	372	387	386	406
June 13	352	409	353	429
June 20	354	394	372	437
June 27	394	372	341	417
July 4	511	393	547	731
July 11	434	393	497	871
July 18	574	481	591	915
July 25	471	481	609	1,139
Aug. 1	561	748	676	1,148
Total	5,224	5,386	5,953	8,193

From the foregoing, while I shall not assume the reduction of the mortality of the City at the present time, is attributable to the labors of this department during the past few weeks, a proof of such fact might, in part, be found in the fact that up to the last of May, being the time when this department commenced the work of cleaning the streets, the mortality of each week in 1857 exceeded that of the year previous, and the last of these weeks was the greatest of any corresponding week for four years past. This excess continued during the next three weeks, but slightly during which the work of purification was in active progress, and the week ending June 27 showed a reduction of deaths to a less number than any week for the past four years—a lesser number which has continued for every week since for the same period as compared with the past four years, and a total reduction for the past 13 weeks, as follows:

1857 less than 1856	196
1857 less than 1855	709
1857 less than 1854	2,049

These facts speak with force to prove what is evident to all "who will not see" than an improvement has been effected, not only in the condition of the streets, but in the healthfulness of the City.

Having thus shown the history of the management of this Department, the obstacles which have operated to delay the success of the labors, and that the work has been done in an economical manner, that the streets are not only improved, but the health of the City has been maintained, and its trade and prosperity, consequently, increased, I may be pardoned, if, in conclusion, I shall prefer, in the performance of my duties, to seek other legal advice than that which recent events has shown is not always the most reliable, and to disregard, in future, that profound legal talent which fails to apply the statute of limitations to regard for the truth—at all events, ever determined honestly, faithfully and fearlessly to perform my official duties as one of the servants of the public. I shall endeavor, by my zeal, to repel slanders, and merit the confidence of those who have elected me to the discharge of an important trust.

Respectfully,

GEO. W. MORTON, City Inspector.

The City Inspector discontinued the work of street cleaning on the 8th of April, 1854, and the Cholera first made its appearance in May.

Commissioners of Health.

The Commissioners of Health met at the City Hall yesterday.

The following was received:

To the Commissioners of Health of the City of New-York:

The undersigned, to whom was referred the petition of the consignees of the bark Clara Windsor, asking to proceed with the vessel forthwith to the City of New-York, and there to discharge her cargo, respectfully report that as the petition states, the bark recently arrived from Port-au-Prince, with a mixed cargo of coffee and logwood, with all hands on board well, and without having lost any of the crew or the passage, or while in her port of departure.

Considering that yellow fever of a very malignant type, has prevailed for the last two months at Port-au-Prince, the above statement of the sanitary condition of the Clara Windsor, and the remarkable escape of her crew from an attack of yellow fever, is very creditable to her Captain as well as her consignees; for the experience of the Clara Windsor in respect to the "scourage" is the exception, and not the general rule, of vessels arriving at Quarantine from Port-au-Prince, and several other West India ports.

As will be seen by the petition, the fact of there having been no sickness on board of the vessel or among the crew, is the principal reason assigned for asking permission to proceed with the vessel and cargo to this City. This reason, when urged in connection with the statement that the ship is perfectly "acclimated to the poison" of yellow fever, ought not to weigh with your honorable Board in favor of allowing the vessel and cargo to proceed. If a vessel is lucky enough to obtain an "acclimated crew"—a crew which is proof against yellow fever poison, the fact of her coming into port without the disease and reporting that her men have been entirely well on the passage and, while in the port of departure, cannot be taken as testimony that the vessel and her cargo are free from infection, and hence that it is safe to allow her to proceed to the City.

Vessels from Port-au-Prince, with cargoes of coffee and wood, bringing with them the infection of yellow fever, which not unfrequently [illegible] while engaged in the process of discharging their cargoes. For instance, the brig John Hancock, arrived a few days since from that port from which came the Clara Windsor. The Hancock was quarantined and ordered to discharge her cargo at Quarantine or lighters. The captain and passengers protested as usual against the order, declaring that they and the vessel was free from infection; that she had an unexceptionable cargo of coffee and wood, and that in their opinion it was perfectly safe to the public health to allow her cargo to proceed to the wharfs of the City.

Your honorable Board did not yield to the appeal, but on the other hand remembering the experience with such vessels last year, persisted in the order. And what was the result? One of the stevedores engaged in the discharge of the Hancock's cargo sickened with yellow fever, and now lies in the Marine Hospital almost hopeless with black vomit.

In view of the above facts, the undersigned respectfully recommends that the prayer of the petitioners be denied, and that the vessel be ordered to discharge her cargo, and lighters at Quarantine. Respectfully,

E. H. THOMPSON, Health Officer.

QUARANTINE, S. I., Aug. 6, 1857.

[illegible] Monday, Aug. 3, 1857.

To the Health Officer, Port of New-York:

SIR: The Captain of the brig Bonaparte, from Black River, Jamaica, reports that you have required him to discharge his cargo at Quarantine. The cargo of the vessel consists in part, it is said, deliverable alongside of the ship, viz: Hides, Nos. 20 E. E., for Antwerp, and if you will permit him to discharge it alongside of said ship that vessel, you will confer a favor on us, and we really think it will in no wise interfere with the health arrangements of the City under your charge. The vessel could return to Quarantine to be fumigated upon taking cargo again if you judge it desirable.

Yours, respectfully, HENRY & DE GORDON.

To the Commissioners of Health of the City of New-York:

The undersigned, to whom was referred the petition of the owners or consignees of the brig Bonaparte, from Black River, Jamaica, asking permission to bring their vessel to the wharves of the City of New-York for the purpose of discharging the cargo into a vessel bound for Antwerp, respectfully reports that the vessel in question took in her cargo from an infected port, where the atmosphere was unwhanged with poison from yellow fever; that he makes this statement from official accounts received of the sanitary condition of Black River, and also from the fact that vessels recently coming from said port to the Port of New-York have reported deaths on the passage from yellow fever; and that therefore he deems it unsafe to the public health to grant the prayer of the petitioners. Very respectfully,

E. H. THOMPSON, Health Officer.

QUARANTINE, S. I., Aug. 5, 1857.

The above reports were accepted and ordered on file. The recommendation therein contained was adopted.

Schooner Norman, from Kingston, Jamaica, arrived Aug. 7, having discharged, was allowed a certain permit.

Complaint was made regarding condition of slaughter-house at No. 74 Third-street, between First and Second avenues. Referred to the City Inspector.

Petition of brig Colonel Pennington was laid on the table until to-morrow.

QUARANTINE DISCHARGE.

The following was received by the Board, and on motion of Dr. BEDFORD, was ordered on file. The Doctor said that the Board would remember that Capt. ACKLEY, referred to in the communication, appeared a few days since, and asked for a written permit to land his cargo in the City, and that he was told that such permit would or would not be granted, after the cargo had been inspected by the Inspector of Vessels, depending upon its condition.

To the Commissioners of Health of the City of New-York:

GENTLEMEN: I notice in the New-York Herald, Times, and Tribune of this day, under the head of "Quarantine Matters," a statement relating to the schooner Cleopatra, which is to me most surprising, and which is unjust to Capt. ACKLEY, as well as other citizens of this village, demands a prompt contradiction. The Cleopatra arrived here, I think, July 22, and with the cargo, (in short ballast time,) as stated in the communication of PARKS & Co., with the addition, however, of a few green hides in a water cask, which, by some strange fingerings, is now made mention of. The communication also says, "Every state that 'those who have visited the vessel in question, represent the stench (even with the hatches shut) as intolerable.'" I am not aware of what kind of representations some persons may have made, but I have been on board, and visited several times after her arrival, and never smelt anything as all pertaining to her cargo complained from others, as even from the usual bilgy. Quag.—What kind of a nose must a man have to smell through a three-inch plank and cask of water?

The truth is, Captain ACKLEY came here, where his vessel belongs, and his family and relatives reside, with the purpose of overhauling his vessel, in order to go South again as soon as possible, in order to save expense, get quick dispatch, and also to have the privilege of being with his family, he having been absent from home many months. It was the understanding between him and the shippers, and also between him and the consignees, that he should re-ship the cargo from here to the port of New-York. Captain ACKLEY has in person attended and consulted with the Board of Health, and intended no wrong or evasion whatever.

He has never been asked by one of the officious persons who endeavored to get up an excitement against him to remove his vessel, and they never remonstrated with him; and they must be aware that the lives of Capt. ACKLEY's family and friends are at dear to him, perhaps, as those of any who signed or circulated such report. No sickness has occurred on board to my knowledge. That is like the other hearsays. As to the application to the Justices of the Peace and other officers, I do not credit it. So far as the application to the Justice is concerned, I know it to be all together a mistake, and no such application was made at all as was set forth.

To show how much contagion was to be feared from the vessel, I need only say that I heard our oldest practising physician offer to go and stay on board of her, and sleep on the hides at that, for $5.

The most charitable construction that can be put on the communication I have referred to is, that it was written by one man, (as appears by its pronoun I,) who was "scared to death" by three hundred and twenty-two dried hides, as dry even as the bones which they once covered are now. The sad looking green turtle, appearing to his imagination like the pestilence, conquered the "terror of the threshold," and the others whose names appear may have signed, out of sympathy or from want of thought or proper reflection of the subject, as it often comes to us in similar matters. Rest assured then that, neither the turtle or yellow jack has as yet harmed anyone here. Asking that this communication may meet with publicity, as did that of PARKS & Co., I am, gentlemen, with much respect, Your obedient servant,

E. F. CARPENTER, Justice of the Peace.

GREENPORT, L. I., Monday, Aug. 3, 1857.

Aug. 4.—I also find this morning a certificate from Supervisor and physician relative to said vessel and cargo.

*To the Commissioners of Health of the in favor of repealing the house of Hon. Corporation No. 8. Also, concurring with the Board of Aldermen in grant David S. Rider to procure a Hostler's badge at his own expense. And upon other special matters.

HARRY HOWARD AND HIS "HERM."

A communication was received from the Chief Engineer, relative to building a shed in the Seventh Ward.

The Engineer's note is very brief. He says: "In reply to your resolution of inquiry regarding the twenty-foot section of the wood shed in the Seventh Ward, and placing therein an old truck, I most respectfully beg leave to inform your honorable body that said truck and shed were placed there, after consulting with Comptroller Flagg, on my authority."

The communication was read, and sought to be referred to a Special Committee.

Councilman WARREN spoke with unusual earnestness and vociferation, chiefly against the President and members as having used him unfairly. He mentioned that as the representative of the Fourteenth Ward he had on this and upon other occasions been prevented from the legitimate expression of the opinions of his constituents. "Good God!" said the Councilman, "Who, or what is this Harry Howard?" "The Chief Engineer," (ironically.)

The member proceeded with great warmth and personality to denounce the Engineer, and also his own treatment by the Board.

A member desired the President to maintain the dignity of the Chair, and suppress such language.

After a time Councilman WARREN subsided, and other members urged the matter a little more coolly.

The matter was eventually referred to the Committee on Fire Department.

NEW CITY HALL.

A paper in reference to the New City Hall was sought to be referred to the Committee on Repairs and Supplies.

Councilman McCLAVEY said he had the honor to be the Chairman on Public Buildings. Why should it not be referred to his Committee? Referred to Committee on Repairs and Supplies.

BURGLLY'S REWARDS.

Upon a proposal to offer rewards for the discovery of murderers, Councilman OTTERSON said the murderers of Burdell ought to be included.

Councilman WAUGH observed that the murderers of Burdell had been already tried. She was now in custody, and the baby was born. [A laugh.]

Several members spoke on the subject of the offer of suitable rewards generally. The member for the Fourteenth offered a resolution as an amendment, very inclusive in its relations, but limiting the amount of rewards to $2,000.

Councilman OTTERSON thought $2,500 a convenient sum.

Councilman WARREN claimed he had a right to amend to substitute $100,000 if he thought proper. He wished to adhere to the proposal of $2,500.

Councilman WAUGH charged the last speaker with endeavoring to kill the matter. There was no need to keep members squabbling all night.

Councilman WARREN rose to order and disclaimed all factious opposition. [Cries of adjourn—question, question.]

Councilman OTTERSON embodied a resolution including the murderers of Burdell and Van Liew, and the reward as $2,500. That the Mayor be desired to offer such a reward.

Councilman HUGHES would amend by substituting $1,000. Cries of question. A member moved the adjournment. The motion was lost.

Councilman OTTERSON's motion was then put and lost for want of a constitutional vote, 29 to 6. Laid on the table.

The Board then adjourned to the following day at 5 o'clock.

The Board of Councilmen met on Thursday, the President J. N. PHILLIPS, Esq., in the Chair.

A resolution was offered to compel the Twenty-third-street Ferry to run their boats as frequently as the Tenth-street Ferry. Laid on the table.

A resolution was offered to authorize the Comptroller to pay the salaries of the disbanded policemen. Laid on the table.

THE CHILD'S HOSPITAL.

Some explanations were afforded by Councilman Jones as to the Constitution of the Child's Hospital, and it was urged that it was incumbent upon the City to defend the benevolent ladies who had originated that enterprise from the consequences of actions at law instituted by Messrs. Brevoort and Odell in reference to rights connected with the land on which the new Hospital is in course of erection. The managers of such institution state that, relying entirely on the good faith of the Corporation, they have contracted for the erection of buildings—and that the above-named gentlemen deny all ownership on the part of the Corporation. The Board concurred with the Board of Aldermen in their action.

The Committee appointed to award the gold box bequeathed by General JACKSON presented their report, stating that they had decided in favor of Major Garrett W. Dykeman as the most valiant and brave soldier engaged among the New-York Volunteers in the Mexican war, and recommending that the 14th of September be fixed as the day for the public presentation of the bequest.

It was proposed that the hospitalities of the City be extended to Andrew Jackson, Jr., who has manifested a willingness to deliver the box in person, and that $1,500 be appropriated for that purpose, it being the anniversary of the entrance of the American army into Mexico. Referred to the Committee on Finance.

Rewards for the discovery of murderers and some other unimportant business was laid over, and the Board adjourned, after again taking up, at the last moment the question of paying the old police, with which the Board concurred by a vote of 40 to 1.

GAS LIGHT.—The Committee of the Board of Councilmen on Lamps and Gas met yesterday, at the City Hall, in reference to the confirmation of the contract with the Harlem Gas Company for lighting the streets with gas above Seventy-ninth street. Councilman CRAWFORD occupied the Chair. Proposals have been advertised for, and certain parties allege that the charges of the Company are too high, both for lighting and for fitting up the posts. Mr. WALTER BEADY, of Harlem, was heard in support of that allegation.

Councilman McCABELE urged the propriety of not being too economical as to expense. The City was the receiver. If a man bought a lot, or wished to build a house or occupy one, his first inquiry was: Is the gas there—is the Croton water there? Such things enhanced the value of property not fifty, but 100 per cent. He hoped the Committee would report in favor of the confirmation, and that speedily. It would be a general benefit to the City. After hearing other arguments the Committee adjourned, to report at an early day.

LONG ISLAND.

Mr. Murphy's Speech at the Complimentary Dinner.

The President read the following, the third toast of the evening:

"Our distinguished guest, Hon. Henry C. Murphy—Eminently fitted by education, ability and experience in public affairs for the high duties with which he is intrusted, he carries with him upon his honorable mission to a foreign Court equally the manifest confidence of the Government and the affectionate regards of his fellow-citizens."

Mr. MURPHY, in rising to respond, was greeted with deafening peals of applause. In response to the sentiment he spoke as follows, being frequently interrupted with manifestations of approval:

MR. PRESIDENT AND GENTLEMEN: Most sincerely do I acknowledge your kindness. Conscious as I am that it is far beyond my merits, words fail me to express my sense of the obligation which you have imposed. To have the good wishes of my friends and neighbors—of those with whom I have always lived, and to whom, if a merciful Providence spares me, I expect to return to spend the remnant of my life—is my greatest ambition. For the cordial manner in which you have met me on this occasion, I offer you the homage of a grateful heart.

Let me hail the expression of the gratification which I experience in meeting the citizens of Brooklyn upon one common platform of social brotherhood, when political differences are forgotten and personal rivalries unknown. With many of you I have myself had warm political contests carried on, upon my part at least with all the zeal and energy of the most determined convictions of right. To meet you under the circumstances of this night affords me the great consolation of believing that in those controversies I have not violated your rights or forgotten the respect due to your character. The asperities of the moment have disappeared with the excitements which gave them birth; they were

"——like snow-flakes on the river,
A moment white—then lost forever."

You have made this the most pleasing incident of my life. Companions of my boyhood, friends of my manhood, associates in many private enterprises and public employments, my fellow-citizens, who have given character and importance to our City—for so short is our municipal history; who have framed its institutions, who have established its credit, who have answered to the call of humanity within its limits, who have provided for the education of its youth and the support of its unfortunate and its infirm; in a word, who have cared for both its physical and moral wants—have united in a mark of esteem to me personally, which has sunk deep into my heart, and which I will cherish, not only during my sojourn in the distant land to which I am about to go, but wherever I may be so long as things of earth shall interest my mental sense.

The realities of this scene awaken the memories of the past and open visions of the future. Here were the playgrounds of my youth, and on humble porches, now displaced for grander mansions, sat the fathers whose words to me were oracles of wisdom. They have gone—the patriarchs have been gathered to their fathers—and we "in our turn shall follow them." The hamlet of an hundred houses now takes rank among the first cities in the land. The change is marvelous. Its spacious docks and warehouses, its spires and buildings, now challenge the admiration of the stranger as he joins in the admiration of his noble bay; and it vies in all the elements of material greatness with the great city beside it. It requires no spirit of prophecy to foretell the union of the two at no distant day. The river which divides them will soon cease to be a line of separation; and bestride by the Colossus of commerce, will form the link which will bind them together.

With you rests in no small degree this destiny. I doubt not that the same spirit of advancement, and the same enterprise which has hitherto distinguished the citizens of Brooklyn, will mark their future action. You have established institutions which require your fostering but discriminating care. You have gained a character for public faith and honor which it behooves you to maintain unimpaired. You have engaged in a work of great magnitude, and of the utmost importance to your growth and prosperity. Citizens of unblemished reputation and of great intelligence and industry have devoted themselves to its completion.

When done it will not only be a monument of your enterprise and foresight, and a fresh impetus to your progress, but truly a fountain of health to the people.

Let me not, in speaking of the living, omit to do justice to the dead, to whom the honor is due of forming, in a great degree, the character and shaping the destiny of the city. When Brooklyn first assumed the habiliments of a city, like the stripling when he first takes the garb of a man, she imagined that she had the power and ability which belong to mature years. Extravagant projects of public improvement were begun, but they were beyond both the requirements and means of the time. The embarrassments of 1836-37 found her with a depleted treasury and a large floating debt. The depression in trade which followed, and the stagnation in real estate, rendered the most rigid economy necessary to the management of her affairs.

There have passed from among us two and two only of those who have held the Chief Magistracy of the City. Both, however, occupied the Mayoral Chair at the period to which I have referred, and they were the men for the time. Both were remarkable for their perfect knowledge of our municipal affairs. The first, glorying in his Dutch descent, possessed that strong sense of commercial honor which characterized the people from which he claimed his ancestry. He made his Mayoralty distinguished by satisfying the claims of all the public creditors, and established the credit of the City on a foundation which has never been shaken.

The other coming early in life from New-England, like many others who have added character and wealth to the City, brought with him here the habits of economy and accountability, of which our affairs were then in want. He set the example of a personal supervision of every department of the City Government, and relieved the public burdens by his frugal administration. I need say no more. I could say no less of JACOBUS JONATHAN and JOCHUM STRAGUN.

Nor let me pass by the brothers GRAHAM. They have gone to their reward, but their noble charities live after them.

From these sources I am called to a new career in the country which first sent settlers to this portion of our Republic. It is more perhaps from courtesy to an ancient ally, than to any actual necessity, that Congress has provided for a Minister to the Hague. Time was when the relation between the two countries was very different from what it is at present. We were then a mere dependency of that power—a mere trading post of a commercial company, subject to the government of a Board of Directors and its rapacious agents. The Government at home gave little heed to the complaints of the people here. They were engaged in a strife for the dominion of the seas. Their naval heroes, VAN TROMP and DE RUYTER, were engaged in battling the fleets of the Commonwealth of England, and of the ungrateful CHARLES whom they protected. The Belgian lion emblazoned in their geography with his jaws upon the very heart of France, and his tail sweeping the Provinces of the Zuyder Zee, was then a powerful antagonist of the naval power of the world.

By their neglect they lost their dominion over this country forever. The people, chagrined at their abandonment, soon became reconciled to the new dynasty, and even the Governor expatriated himself, and became a subject of the British Crown. But in our Revolution, as if to atone for its former fault, the Dutch Republic was the first to follow France in acknowledging our independence, while yet the contest was undecided. She had failed us when she might have profited by her succor, but she nobly sustained us in our greatest need, when we could no longer be of service to her. She encouraged and supported our drooping cause, and served the arms of the patriots to further exertion, until finally we took our position coequal with herself in the family of nations. For three-quarters of a century our relations of peace and friendship have been undisturbed, and naught but the ordinary claims of commerce have engaged the attention of the two countries.

I do not, therefore, expect that the matters with which I will be charged, will be of such interest as to a great general attention; but I will endeavor so to represent the country as to prove that the confidence of the Government in me has not been misplaced, and that your partiality, my friends and neighbors, has not been unworthily bestowed. While I regard the distinction which I have received at the hands of the President as receiving additional honor from the favor with which you have received it, I will regard his approval of my labors, when I shall have surrendered my trust as a most fortunate event if they shall meet yours also.

I will ask it a happy circumstance that from here, where first the skipper Hudson navigated a European bark, and where were laid the foundations of the New-Netherland, I will be able to carry to Fatherland the kind remembrances of the children. I will testimony that the same habits of industry, the same high sense of commercial honor, and the same un*conquerable love of liberty which distinguished their* fathers, characterize their descendants.

With a heart overflowing with thankfulness for your generous sympathy, and with the most fervent prayers for your individual happiness, I bid you farewell.

Annual Meeting of the Kings' County Board of Supervisors.

The annual meeting of this Board was held on Tuesday evening. Supervisor LINDSAY was called to preside.

THE PRESIDENT—The first business before the Board was the election of a President, which resulted in the reelection of Mr. DAVID A. LINDSAY, of the Eighteenth Ward, Democrat. The opposing candidates were SAMUEL SMITH, Democrat, and GEORGE W. BLUNDELL, American, and JOHN DOE, Neutral.

The Police.—An "opinion" from Judge LOTT, in relation to the rights, duties, liabilities and powers of the Board under the Metropolitan Police Act, especially as set forth in the twenty-eighth section of the Act, was presented, read and placed on file. The Judge gives his view of the law at some length, and concludes: "The result of these views is, that the Board of Supervisors of the County of Kings, on receiving the requisite certificate or resolution of the joint Board of Supervisors and Aldermen of the City of Brooklyn, based upon the apportionment of the Board of Police, and approved by a majority vote of the Auditing Committee, certifying or showing what sums of money are requisite and needful for police purposes, are to proceed to raise and collect the same in the same manner as the sums necessary to defray the contingent and other expenses of the City of Brooklyn are to be raised and collected."

Matron for the Jail.—Some time ago a petition, signed by thirty-seven ladies, was presented to the Board, setting forth the necessity of appointing a Matron for the Female Department in the County Jail. To-day the Committee reported in favor of granting the petition, and ask the petitioners to recommend a suitable person. This report is signed by Supervisors JENCKES, CAMPBELL and SCHENCK. Laid on the table, to be referred to the new Jail Committee when appointed.

Anniversary of Emancipation in the West Indies.

The colored people of Brooklyn met in large numbers in and around the Methodist Episcopal Church (colored) in Bridge-street, Brooklyn, on Monday evening to celebrate the Seventeenth Anniversary of the Emancipation of the Negroes of British West Indies from Slavery. The Church had been decorated for the occasion. A large banner was hung across the building, in the centre of which there were three figures—one clasping the British flag and the other two bearing shackles on their wrists. On one side there was a portrait of WILBERFORCE and on the other a portrait of CLARKSON. The exercises were commenced with prayer and song—the Liberty Anthem. The act of emancipation was then read by a young colored lady, clearly and correctly; and afterwards an effective address was delivered by Rev. Mr. GLOSSNER, on "The True Glory of a Nation—God and Liberty." The burden of his address was that the United States Government was rotten, and therefore unworthy to be the instrument of God. It was a great nation, but the genius of the Government was wrong. The great principle upon which it acted was out of place and improper; and if a change did not take place in that particular, it must surely fall. After an unfavorable reference to Judge TANEY's Dred Scott decision, he closed with the expression of his belief that liberty would yet come to the world and all the inhabitants thereof.

Several songs were sung, additional addresses made, and a poem read by Mr. WILSON.

The meeting was apparently one of pleasure to all concerned.

BROOKLYN BOARD OF HEALTH.—An adjourned meeting of this Board was held on Tuesday evening.

Nuisances.—Complaints were made of the gutters in several of the streets in the Twelfth Ward and the general filthy condition of the streets.

Referred to the Aldermen of the Ward, and clerk directed to notify the Auditor not to audit any more bills of the contractor for cleaning the streets until the streets and gutters are cleaned.

Several vacant lots in the Sixth Ward were complained of as being in a filthy condition. To the Alderman of the Ward to abate.

Cow stables in the Ninth Ward. To Health Warden for examination and report.

Alderman SOMOZA again brought up the nuisance at the foot of Broadway. He had several verbal complaints made to him during the past week; also, of Mr. Cornell's place, at the foot of South Eleventh-street. He had not noticed the latter place until Monday morning, when on a ferry-boat, and then the stench was so strong as to cause several ladies to turn pale; it was very offensive. He moved that Mr. Cornell be directed to abate the nuisance, and remove the offal and carcasses between the hours of 11 P. M. and 4 A. M., each day. Adopted.

Alderman SOMOZA reported several sunken lots, which were referred to the Common Council.

Several bills were ordered paid, when the Board adjourned.

☞ The Seventeenth Ward Police, Brooklyn, on Wednesday evening, found an orphan girl, ten years old, named MARY JANE RILEY, wandering in the streets. She said that her aunt had turned her into the street, and she was placed in charge of the Superintendents of the Poor.

IMPORTANT ARREST.—Deputy Sheriff HIGGINS, of Brooklyn, has engaged, for several weeks past, in ferreting out the perpetrators of a highway robbery at the foot of Johnson-street, on the 26th of July, 1856, upon the person of JOHN BROWN, from whom they took a gold watch valued at $80. Three parties were concerned in the robbery, and officer HIGGINS has succeeded in arresting two, who give their names as WILLIAM BARRETT and JAMES WILSON, both colored. The former was secured at the Five Points, New-York, where he is the leader of a gang of thieves, and the latter was taken from a hotel at Coney Island, where he was playing waiter.

The watch was pawned by a woman named MARGT STEWART, for $5. *She sold the ticket for $1, to PAT*RICK DONOHUE, who keeps a grocery-store on High-street, near Jay. He refused to deliver the watch, and was taken before Justice CORNWELL yesterday, when he gave bail in the sum of $500, to answer a charge of receiving stolen goods, knowing the same to have been stolen. Miss MARGARET was also locked up for trial.

RIVER THIEVES ARRESTED.—ROGER COSTELLO and JOHN MINICH were arrested in Brooklyn, Wednesday evening, by Officers FERRY and HARLAN, of the Third Precinct, just as they were about to cross Hamilton-avenue ferry with a wagon-load of coffee. The officers yesterday ascertained that the coffee had been stolen from the ship John Boughton, at the lower Quarantine ground, and belonged to Messrs. ROLES, MULVER & Co., No. 96 Pearl-street, New-York. MINICH was held in the sum of $1,000, yesterday, by Justice BLATCHLEY, to answer, and COSTELLO was held as a witness.

BOLD ROBBERY.—A man, named HENRY JONES, was committed by Justice CORNWELL, in Brooklyn, yesterday, to answer a charge of grand larceny. It appears that on Saturday last he entered store No. 97 Fulton street, under the pretence of desiring to purchase a gold watch chain. He examined several, and pocketed two. The chains were missed immediately, and the clerk started in pursuit of the thief, and found him on one of the Fulton Ferry-boats. When arrested he threw both chains into the river.

FIRES IN BROOKLYN.—Store No. 505 Grand-street, was damaged by fire, Wednesday evening, to the extent of $20. The fire was communicated by a gas-burner in a show-window, and was extinguished by Officer MARSLAND of the Sixth Precinct.

About the same time, a frame shanty called a school-house, at the corner of Remsen-street and Graham-avenue, caught fire. The fire was extinguished without much loss.

FOUND.—Young SHERMAN and another boy, who floated out to sea in an open boat last week, were picked up by some fishermen, on Sunday, off Sandy Hook. They had been adrift 36 hours when rescued. SHERMAN is a son of Officer SHERMAN, Brooklyn, and his companion was from Rahway, N. J., at which place they embarked, and were driven out to sea by adverse winds.

SUICIDE.—About 12 o'clock Wednesday night last, Mrs. MARINA AMELIA LITTLE, residing at No. 186 York-street, Brooklyn, was found suspended by the neck in her bedroom. Coroner REDDING held an inquest yesterday, when a verdict of death by suicide was rendered. No cause is assigned for the act.

BURGLARY.—A coal office occupied by T. L. TERRY, corner of Tenth-street and Broadway, Brooklyn, was entered by burglars on Monday night. They carried away the safe containing $30 and some valuable papers.

☞ An owner is wanted for several articles of new clothing at the Deputy Superintendent's Office, Brooklyn, taken from a thief, and supposed to have been stolen from some store in the country on Long Island.

A CANADA BANK ROBBED OF $16,000.—On Thursday night last a daring and successful robbery was perpetrated in the branch office of the Bank of Upper Canada, which is situated in the western wing of Parliament Buildings, and cash to the amount of $16,000 carried off. Since the late removal of the seat of Government to Toronto, the Bank has occupied an apartment in the buildings, fitted it up as an office and placed a Cashier, Mr. CUMMINS, in it, with funds to meet the payment of Government warrants, allowance to M. P. P.'s, salaries of the officials, and other ordinary expenses. This arrangement, which was considered convenient, obviated the necessity of parties receiving checks going to the head Bank, a considerable distance; but that arrangement has turned out a serious loss to the Bank. The officials are paid on the last day of each month, and to meet this expenditure over $4,000 were brought up to the Parliament House on Thursday. The perpetrators of the robbery must have been aware of this, which has led to the suspicion that none but persons well acquainted with the fact have accomplished the deed. It is said that Mr. CUMMINS left the office at the usual hour on Thursday, leaving all, as he believed, secure. Next morning, on returning, he was startled to observe the door of the safe open, the tin box inside rifled of its valuable contents, and all the cash abstracted, save about $2,000 or $3,000 in silver and gold, which lay in a corner, and which, it is probable, escaped the notice of the robbers. Upon further examination it was found that the entrance was effected by breaking a portion of glass next the brass catch of the window, and then raising the latter up. On looking about the window, $600 in $5 bills were found underneath, either dropped or thrown down purposely by the thief.—Toronto Globe.

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE.—LYSANDER HOWE, a farmer, 42 years of age, left his family in Grove, Allegany County, about the 10th of February last, for the purpose, as he said, of going to Lansing, Michigan, since which time nothing has been heard of him. He is a son of AARON HOWE, of Livonia, Livingston County. He had become addicted to the intemperate use of liquor, and it is feared it is the family that he is not living. They are exceedingly anxious to hear of him or learn his fate, and will be thankful for any information concerning him, addressed to Mrs. SARAH HOWE, Grove Centre, Allegany Co., N. Y.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Hon. Justice Davies.

THE CASE OF MRS. HOPKINS, AN ALLEGED LUNATIC.

In the matter of Mrs. Maria E. B. Hopkins, an alleged lunatic.—A few days since Judge DAVIES granted an order in the nature of a writ de lunatico inquirendo, and appointing Dr. Metcalfe, Andrew H. Green and Dr. Scudder to inquire into the alleged lunacy of Mrs. Maria E. B. Hopkins, who had been previously discharged by Recorder Smith, on a writ of habeas corpus, from the Bloomingdale Lunatic Asylum.

The matter came up yesterday, on a motion made by John E. Graham, Esq., to vacate the order de lunatico inquirendo previously granted by the Judge.

Mr. Graham argued that there was no cause for the granting of the writ, and that it was obtained by the other side only by suppressing the facts of the case, for he was certain that if his Honor had heard the circumstances of the case he would not have granted the writ.

Numerous affidavits were read on each side, and the Judge concluded not to deliver his decision until he and Dr. Metcalfe should make a personal examination as to the condition of Mrs. Hopkins.

Before Hon. Justice Bishop.

DECISIONS.

Alsah Blaisdell vs. Henry J. Raymond and others.—The defendants' answers held to have been properly served and the plaintiff's attorney required to receive them accordingly; defendants' to have $10 costs of motion.

Joseph T. Pitkering vs. Hannah E. Pitkering.—Judgment rendered for an absolute divorce.

Isaac Pye vs. Edward R. Hallam.—Defendant's motion to dissolve injunction denied; plaintiff's application for leave to file a supplemental complaint against Pomeroy, and for an injunction against him, granted; costs of each motion, $10, to abide the event of the action, and be recovered by the party ultimately successful.

Cangemi, the Murderer of Anderson.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Before Hon. Recorder Smith.

Shortly after the opening of Court, yesterday morning, A. Oakey Hall, Esq., the District-Attorney, addressed the Recorder, and stated that as Michael Cangemi, the alleged murderer of the patrolman, Eugene Anderson, had been indicted by the Grand Jury, and the said Cangemi being too poor to provide counsel for his defence, he would move that counsel should be assigned him by the Court, before he was arraigned to plead. The Recorder accordingly nominated Mr. Ashmead, late District Attorney of the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, Mr. Blankman, and Mr. Franscilini,—the latter to act chiefly as interpreter. The business of the Court then proceeded.

HONORABLE ACQUITTAL.

A genteel young man, named James Campbell, was charged with the serious crime of robbery in the first degree. The prosecutor, John W. Weed, a clerk out of employment, deposed that about midnight on May 27, he was assaulted by the prisoner, at the corner of Hudson and Hammersley streets, and robbed of $17. He identified the prisoner as the man who so attacked and robbed him.

But the evidence of Mr. Weed so completely broke down, upon cross-examination, that the Assistant District-Attorney withdrew the charge, and the Jury, under instructions from the Recorder, returned a formal verdict of "Not guilty." Mr. Campbell was honorably discharged.

ASSAULT, WITH INTENT TO KILL, BY A BOY.

John Devine, a mere lad, was charged with assaulting with a dirk-knife, on June 13, about midnight, with intent to rob him, at the corner of Avenue B and Tenth-street, a German named John Sass. Devine stabbed Sass in the head with a butcher's knife, inflicting a dangerous wound. Dr. Barry attended him, and testified that if inflammation had set in, he would certainly have died.

The Jury found Devine guilty, and the Recorder, after remarking that he had been convicted of several larcenies, and was one of the worst boys in the City, sentenced him to seven years in the State Prison.

Francis Smith and Charles Howard, two mere lads, pleaded guilty to assault and battery, and were sentenced to six months in the Penitentiary.

Julia Kennedy pleaded guilty to petit larceny, and went for four months to the Penitentiary.

Louisa Schmidt pleaded guilty to an attempt at grand larceny, and will be found at Blackwell's Island for the next twelve months.

William Young, a boy aged fifteen years, with four boys who were not arrested, attacked a German gentleman, aged 36 years, in Tompkins square, on the night of July 29. The German gentleman was named Bernard Rudolf. The boys asked him to treat them to lager-bier, and on his declining, they snatched at his watch chain, and the prisoner stabbed him in the shoulder with an open knife. Afterwards the prisoner was arrested, and the other boys ran away. It was not a very clear case. The Jury said "Guilty," however, and the Recorder said "six months," and for that period the boy Young disappears from society.

CANGEMI ARRAIGNED.

Michele Cangemi was then called out to plead. When asked by the Interpreter if he was guilty or not guilty, he replied that he knew nothing about anything at all. To the direct question whether he was guilty, he repeated, with a shrug of the shoulder, that he knew nothing about it.

Mr. Hall asked the Court to instruct him that he had had counsel assigned him by the Recorder, whose duty it would be to confer with him. After the prisoner's plea of "not guilty" had been entered, Mr. Hall remarked:

I will say to the Court and my learned friend (Mr. Ashmead) that I am desirous to try this case as speedily as possible. He would have to apply for an additional panel of jurors. In consequence of the odium attaching to the prisoner, said the difficulty that would be found in even impanelling a jury for him.

After some discussion, it was determined that Cangemi's trial should commence on Monday, the 17th inst. An order for an additional panel of 250 jurors was issued by the Recorder.

Thomas Ritchel pleaded guilty to petit larceny. Sentence deferred.

SURROGATE'S COURT.

Before Hon. A W Bradford.

The Law of Guardianship—Construction of Wills—Lapsed Legacies—Life Tenancy.

In the matter of the Estate of Patrick McLeaky, deceased.—THE SURROGATE—Upon the final accounting of the executors in this case, it becomes necessary to determine what direction shall be given in respect to a legacy of fifteen thousand dollars bequeathed to a minor, residing at Florence. It appears that a guardian has been duly appointed at the place of domicil, and authority been regularly conferred upon the Consul-General of Tuscany to receive the legacy from the executor.

The appointment of a guardian for the person or the property of an infant is an act of jurisdiction dependent upon the situation of the person or the property within the territory of the estate. The exercise of this authority flows from the duty incumbent upon the body politic to afford protection to those who are unable to take care of themselves. It is not limited to the cases of subjects or citizens, but extends to all who, from their tender years, require guardianship of person or estate. This important prerogative has ordinarily been administered through the Court of Chancery, though in this country, at an early period, it was found convenient to confide its administration to tribunals having probate jurisdiction. A guardian may be appointed for the person as for the estate of an infant, or for both. In the case of Johnstone vs. Beattie, 10 Cl. & F., 42, the House of Lords decided that it was competent for the Lord Chancellor to appoint a guardian for a minor, whose domicil was in Scotland, where there were testamentary guardians, and who was only temporarily resident in England. The principle was then settled that foreign guardians have no extra territorial authority by virtue of their office, and that the Court of Chancery, when acting in these matters, always "requires that there shall be a guardian appointed within the jurisdiction of the Court, responsible to the Court, and subject to its jurisdiction and authority." In Stephens vs. James, 1 My. and K., 637, an infant had been taken by its father to America, and the Court entertained jurisdiction and ordered maintenance out of the infant's estate, though he was residing in a foreign country. I can find no reason for doubting that the situs of assets belonging to a minor has always been considered a sufficient basis for a grant of guardianship.

The rule in this country was definitely settled many years since. In Newell vs. Dickey, 1 John. C. R., 153, Chancellor Kent held that letters of foreign guardianship afforded no title within this State, and he placed the doctrine on her serving principles, which prevents a recognition of foreign executors and administrators. This analogy appears to be sound and reasonable, and the decision has never been questioned. Chancellor Walworth decided that a foreign executor or administrator might be sued in equity, and expressed the opinion, also, that a foreign guardian was in like manner amenable to the same jurisdiction, but it is manifest that a capacity or title to one differs widely from a capacity to be sued. In Kraft vs. Wickey, 4 Gill and Johns., R. 332, the question was expressly considered, and it was concluded that guardians can sue only in the courts of the country from which they claim their power; although in a Court of Equity, the domestic guardian who has charge of the property, will be compelled to provide for the maintenance and education of his ward resident abroad. The reason upon which a foreign guardian is denied any recognition of his title is substantially this: That all his authority springs out of his official character, and a civil officer as such can of necessity possess no power beyond the limits of the sovereignty by which he is appointed. Such exceptions as may exist have been admitted, not de jure but ex comitate. The law fori primarily prevails in the form and order of the administration of justice, and foreign law is only received so far as it is found consonant with sound principle and public convenience; it is accepted on the basis of international comity, and not because of any inherent right. The continental jurists go further, and insist upon the absolute right and title the guardian appointed at the place of domicil, wheresoever the ward is to be represented; but both in England and in the United States this doctrine does not prevail. Still, however, we recognize and give effect to those laws of the domicil of a party which constitute the status, quality or capacity of the person, and place minors under the authority of tutors or guardians, to such extent as in the discretion of the Court, may seem wise and proper. 1 Burge. Com., pp. 5, 14 25, vol. 2, pp. 1, 10; Story, Conf. L., § 499 to § 504, a. In this view it might, perhaps, be competent for a court of equity to permit an administrator or executor to transmit the funds of a minor domiciled in a foreign country to the guardian abroad, on satisfactory evidence being given that adequate security has been afforded for the faithful administration of the property. This, however, would clearly be a matter of discretion, and not of strict right. In the absence of special direction, it might fall within the province of the Surrogate to consider such a discretionary power, but the statutes of New-York provided the mode in which the rights of infants in this respect must be protected, and this Court has no room, therefore, for any course of procedure not plainly and doubtful or implied powers. The revised statutes authorize executors to pay legacies due infants "to the general guardian," "who shall be required to give security to the minor, to be approved by the Surrogate for the faithful application and accounting for such legacy," "and, if there be no such guardian, or the Surrogate do not direct such payment, the legacy shall be invested with permanent securities, under the direction of the Surrogate, in the name and for the benefit of such minor upon current interest, and the interest may be applied under the direction of the Surrogate to the support and education of such minor." 2 R. S., p. 91, § 27, 28, 29, 30, 31. Even if there be a general guardian deriving his authority under our State law, the Surrogate must see that proper security has been given before requiring the executor to pay the legacy; and if no guardian has been appointed, or security has not been given, the Surrogate must direct the funds to be paid into Court, and invested for the infant's benefit. This course may in some cases work a hardship, but the law is designed for the protection of infants, its provisions are precise and special, and it is my duty to see them properly enforced. Unless, then, a guardian be appointed within this State, the legacy due to this infant must be paid into Court, and invested for his benefit. The interest may be transmitted to the place of domicil, from time to time, for the maintenance and education of the legatee, under the direction of the Surrogate.

The testator gave to his neice, wife of one of the executors, the sum of $80,000, and to each of the executors, as fees of commissions, the sum of $10,000. These legacies were paid soon after the grant of letters testamentary, and the residuary legatees now claim that the executors should be charged with interest for the period intervening between the time of payment and the date when the payment should have been made in the usual course of administration. The term of one year is allowed for the adjustment of an estate, and legacies are not ordinarily payable before, unless the testator has specially directed. On the other hand, residuary legatees are entitled to all the profits and increase. (Pearson vs Pearson, 1 Sch. & Lef., 10,) to all the interest and income accruing during the year allowed for settlement. In other words, the property is theirs, subject only to the payment of charges, debts and legacies. If any debt or legacy be claimed before it became due, their rights are affected if the executors withdraw a productive fund, for the purpose of paying the debt or legacy, without compelling a rebate of interest. In such a case, the executors should make good the loss to the parties injured. For example, these legacies of fifty-four thousand dollars, at the time of payment, were worth less than their face by the interest up to the time they fell due, and the effect of anticipating the payment has been to take the interest, or the use of the fund, if productive from the residuary legatees, who are entitled to it, and give it to the general legatees who are not entitled to it. Suppose a bond or note of the testator payable five years after his death without interest, the injustice of an immediate payment out of the proceeds of productive property, converted into money for that purpose, is too obvious for discussion. The executors must then, in my judgment, place the residuary legatees in the same plight and condition as if the general legacies had not been paid until they became due. On looking into the accounts, it appears that the executors, at the time of qualifying, were debtors to the estate in an amount sufficient to pay the legacies. Had that indebtedness continued they would have been chargeable with interest. If it was, in fact, paid at the time of taking letters testament

New-York Daily Times.

NEW-YORK, FRIDAY, AUGUST 7, 1857.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The steamship Persia, from Liverpool on the 22d ult., arrived at this port yesterday. Her news has been superseded by the Arctic, which brought advices three days later.

The official correspondence between Lord CLARENDON and Lord NAPIER, founded upon dispatches from the British Consul at St. Vincent, Cape de Verde, goes to show that the schooner N. Reed, which left this port in July, 1856, with provisions for the starving people of those Islands, made her benevolent mission the cover for engaging in the Slave-trade. After landing her cargo at St. Vincent, her Captain stated that the vessel was bound to the Island of St. Jago, and thence to the West Indies; she was, however, boarded off the Congo in August, by a British cruiser, the Tomer, under circumstances that excited suspicion, but having been allowed to depart, it is alleged she took on board 500 slaves from Cabeça de Cobra, with [illegible] the vessel. The particulars of this piratical traffic, under cover of philanthropy, are then [illegible] officially to the notice of our Government.

The Ohio Democratic State Convention met at Columbus yesterday, and nominated H. B. PAYNE for Governor, W. H. LYTLE for Lieutenant-Governor, Mr. MEDARY for State Treasurer, and J. RANSBARGER for Secretary of State. The Administration of President BUCHANAN was indorsed.

The examination in the case of Mrs. CUNNINGHAM was continued yesterday, and the evidence closed on the part of the people. The accused, by the advice of her counsel, declined to submit to a physical examination; but the physicians who attended for that purpose, testified that she was apparently in good health, and that no evidence of a recent delivery had been afforded to them. The preliminary examination of the accused, provided by the statute, is appointed to be held this morning, and her counsel has been notified to attend. There was little else talked about yesterday but this affair. In another column will be found an abundance of curious information concerning parties whose names have come before the public in this connection, and some very strange facts that are new and important.

The late murder at Sacketts Harbor has assumed a new and singular phase. The innocence of DONNELLY, to whom Mears laid his death, is now claimed, and strongly urged by many who heretofore believed him guilty. On Monday last, the body of MEARS was exhumed at Chapel Hill Graveyard, and another autopsy made by Dr. FENNER, of this city. The wound inflicted on the throat was found not to have been sufficient to cause death, had prompt and proper steps been taken. A wound was found too upon the arm, indicating that a struggle must have taken place. It is claimed that DONNELLY, being a medical student, was sufficiently versed in surgery to know where to strike the throat fatally, and the wound, in the arm shows that much blood must have been shed, yet no blood was found upon any of DONNELLY's clothing. The direct accusation of MEARS against DONNELLY is accounted for by supposing the former to be greatly excited, and that seeing DONNELLY first he accused him. It is even claimed that the man may have committed suicide while temporarily deranged, and that under hallucination he laid the deed on DONNELLY.

ALEXANDER BOYD, who was shot by a burglar in West Eighteenth-street on Tuesday morning, was alive last evening though it was thought he could not live till morning. A young man, named WM. HENRY MUNDY, was arrested yesterday on suspicion of being one of the burglars by whom the murder was committed. On reaching his house a bloody coat was found, corresponding with the one said to have been worn by the murderer. The prisoner says this coat was given him by CAMPBELL, (previously arrested,) who got blood on it while engaged in a fight a few nights since. The prisoners, three in number, are held for examination.

In the Board of Councilmen last evening, it was decided to agree with the Board of Aldermen in defending the benevolent ladies who have originated the Child's Hospital, from actions at law on the part of Messrs. BEAVOORT and ODELL, who deny the right of the Corporation to the land on which the new building is in course of erection. A Committee having awarded General JACKSON's gold box to Major GARRETT W. DYKEMAN, it was proposed to appropriate $1,500 for a festive celebration on the 14th of September, the anniversary of the entrance of the American army into Mexico. The matter was referred, as a thing of course, to the Committee of Finance, who will report.

The Board of Metropolitan Police Commissioners met again yesterday, but made no progress towards the election of a new Commissioner. After taking 114 votes they had a private consultation of 20 minutes' duration, but did not come to any satisfactory arrangement. They are to try it again to-day.

At the Chamber of Commerce yesterday a communication from the New-York Warehousing Company transmitting a copy of their charter and asking the attention of the Chamber to it, was referred to a special committee. A resolution was adopted, appointing a committee to examine into and report the commercial and postal advantages of the new route from this city to New-Orleans and the modes by which it might be still further developed and concentrated upon this City. A letter from a gentleman in Havana, making statements in relation to the yellow fever in that place, and recommending the establishment of an American Hospital there, was laid on the table to be called up at a future meeting.

An additional panel of 250 Jurors was ordered yesterday, by the Court of Sessions, by Recorder SMITH, for the trial of MICHAEL CANGEMI, the Italian charged with the murder of EUGENE ANDERSON, the policeman. He was arraigned yesterday, and pleaded "Not Guilty." His trial will commence on Monday, the 17th inst. Messrs. ASHMEAD, late District-Attorney in Pennsylvania, (Eastern District,) BLANKMAN, of this City, and FRANZOLINI, have been assigned by the Court as his counsel.

Six more witnesses were examined yesterday before Coroner CRAIGE, at Hoboken, in the inquest in the case of young LOMPERES, who was so severely injured at the house of prostitution No. 3 Mulberry-street, on Saturday night last, that he died shortly afterwards. The evidence thus far gives no positive clue to the murderers. The case stands adjourned till Saturday, when probably the evidence will be closed. Meanwhile, the landlady of the house, the barkeeper, and one of the girls, have been arrested on suspicion of being the murderers, and held on bail to wait the termination of the inquest.

Mayor WOOD has been sued in the Fourth District Court, before Judge ANDERSON, for a policeman's pay. JAMES DUNNING brings the suit as the assignee of SAMUEL T. MARTZ, for services rendered by him as a policeman, from May 23 to June 22, 1857, amounting at $700 a year, to $72 44. Counsel for the defence moved to dismiss the suit, and gave seven different reasons for so doing. Decision reserved.

There was something of an excitement yesterday, at the City Hall, occasioned by the appearance of a constable with an execution against the City, and determined to levy on the City property. His first intention was to take the portrait of Senator SEWARD from the Governor's room, but finally he came down to "old HAYS," the noted thief-catcher, in Mr. VALENTINE's room, and carried him off to the office of an auctioneer.

In the Surrogate's Court, yesterday, in the matter of the will of PATRICK MCLEERY, a point of law in reference to guardianship of minors was decided. The testator bequeathed a legacy of $15,000 to a minor residing in Italy. The Surrogate decides that the guardian must be appointed in this country. This will was executed in Paris in 1854, without the formalities requisite to a valid disposition of real property in the State of New-York; and it appearing that a previous will, made in 1852, executed according to the forms of our law, is still in existence, the Surrogate reserves decision upon other points until this latter is offered for probate.

The celebrated bark Panchita, which has been in the custody of the United States Marshal since she was delivered here by the British prize crew from the coast of Africa, yesterday slipped out of his hands through an informality in the body of the writ under which Judge BARRS was entertaining a motion for her discharge. The return day of the process was July 28, but as the Marshal had forgotten to publish the notice, the counsel for the prosecution caused the date of return to be altered to Aug. 4. As this was not done by consent of the Judge—by a Clerk or Deputy—the motion for the discharge was granted, upon the ground of informality in the body of the writ. This does not prevent a new libel from being filed, which it is probable will be done.

Yesterday, Mr. GRAHAM moved before Judge DAVIES to vacate the writ de lunatico inquirendo, which had been granted by the Judge a few days previously for the purpose of inquiring into the alleged lunacy of Mrs. MARIA E. B. HOPKINS. Affidavits were read on each side, and the motion was argued at length. Decision reserved.

Two river thieves, named JOHN MUNICH and ROGER CONTELLO, were held in Brooklyn yesterday to answer a charge of stealing $300 worth of coffee from the ship John Boughton, lying at lower Quarantine.

Street-Cleaning by the City Inspector.

City-Inspector MORRON by no means belongs to the Tite Barnacle family. If the Mayor, or the Common Council, or the public, "want to know," it is evident he is perfectly willing to tell them. He is not one of that taciturn school, in the Circumlocution Office, which believes that the best "way not to do it" is to hold one's tongue and look wise, but adopts the more characteristic policy of deluging his interrogators with a flood of words. Day before yesterday Mr. MORRON sent to the Common Council his reply to the question, which has been unceasingly asked since the 1st of June, why he has not advertised for contracts to clean the streets. It was proximately elicited by a communication from Mayor WOOD, calling attention to the renewal of Bollingism in street matters, of which the Mayor says: "It was supposed that we had reached the utmost extent to which official imprudence or profligacy could go; but I find there is yet a lower depth." Mr. ESLING, similarly circumstanced, would have pursued the corrupt tenor of his way, unruffled and undisturbed, so long as plunder on the one hand afforded him compensation for the abuse on the other. Not so his more pugnacious successor. He will not hear that patient camel, the tax-paying community, groan under its unprecedented burden, without at least pricking him sharply for daring to make his complaints audible, and, if unable, with entire truth, to plead "Not Guilty" to the charge of violating the law, avails himself of the privilege of abusing somebody equally delinquent with himself.

It is necessary to remark, in order to do the City Inspector full justice, that but a very minute portion of the document, addressed by him to the Common Council, has any other than a very remote relation to the subject of which it professes to treat. What the public want to know is, whether Mr. MORRON has or has not the legal right to clean the streets of the City "on his own hook" at the rate of $600,000 per annum? If by any law or want of law this monstrous power really belongs to him, the only remedy which the community have for the abuse is to agitate for ameliorated legislation at the earliest possible moment. If, however, the prerogatives assumed by Mr. MORRON are in distinct violation of the Charter, he ought not to be permitted to pursue his ill-judged course for an hour; nor can we reconcile with their duty the conduct of the Comptroller and Mayor in signing warrants for the sums which he may call for from the City Treasury. The last warrant was for $12,000 for cleaning and removing ashes and garbage from thirteen Wards for two weeks! This is at the rate of $528,000, in one year, for the whole twenty-two Wards, exclusive of boatage. Mr. MORRON answers that it would not always cost so much, and that the aggregate expenditure would be less. And not only is there no reason to suppose it would be less, but the probabilities are that, when the season of mud, ice and snow comes, we should have it proved to us that it must inevitably be more.

Something less than the first half of the City Inspector's communication, is devoted to mingled flings at the Mayor, and unqualified and very exaggerated censure of the conduct of the contractors who were authorized to clean the streets, up to the time when Mr. MORRON took them in charge. What on earth has all this mass of verbiage got to do with the matter? How can the misconduct of Messrs. REYNOLDS, and others, justify Mr. MORRON in breaking the law? A little less than the latter half of the communication is equally taken up with details, wholly extraneous to the real issue. Palpably erroneous conclusions are drawn from insufficient premises, and the gist of much of the argument they affect to present is, that the conduct of the City Inspector is irreproachable, because that of Mr. ESLING and others was abominable! Sandwiched into a narrow space, in the middle of the document, is to be found the little which Mr. MORRON really ought to have said, and this little completely overthrows his own case. It may be summed up as follows: That the Common Council passed resolutions some weeks ago, authorizing the City Inspector to clean the streets; but directing him simultaneously to advertise for proposals for contracts; that the Mayor neither signed, nor returned these resolutions; and that the Corporation Counsel thereupon instructed him—the City Inspector—that he had no "authority to proceed" upon them. This is clear enough, and is, doubtless correct, but what then? If these resolutions became of no effect, through the culpable neglect of Mayor WOOD, in not signing them, what was the duty of Mr. MORRON in the premises? Evidently to go on as though they never had existed, and to advertise for contracts as required by the Charter. This was the ONLY condition upon which Mr. FLAGG consented to pay for the street cleaning, even in that portion of the City where it was most needed; but this is what Mr. MORRON, for manifest reasons, has incorrigibly persisted in not doing. In no case is it true, as he pretends, that "before his Department can advertise for proposals, it is required that the Common Council shall prepare the specifications, and that the same shall be perfected by the Counsel to the Corporation." There is no such "before" in the Charter, nor was there in the Common Council resolutions, which fell to the ground through Mayor WOOD's blameworthy neglect of his duty.

It is only after the contracts have been awarded that the specification item requires to be considered at all, and then not by the City Inspector, but by the Corporation Counsel. It is not possible to invent a quibble by which Mr. MORRON can be imagined to have anything to do with the matter, in such a way as to prevent his advertising as here required. This is so plain that the second resolution of the Common Council, to which Mr. MORRON refers, speaks of the specifications for street cleaning as for future consideration, after the proposals should have been received. It says: "The same to be done by contract and under such specifications as may be directed by the Common Council."

It is not for us to consider how far the City Inspector may be blinded by political or personal interest, in the course he is pursuing, or how far he may labor under a delusion with respect to his duty. To the public it is clear that in not advertising for contracts to clean the streets, he is either "violating or evading the provisions" of the Charter; and the 40th section of that instrument enacts that "any officer of the City Government" who shall do so "shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, in addition to the penalties imposed by law, shall forfeit his office, and be excluded for ever after from receiving or holding any office under the City Charter." It is to be hoped, however, that prompt resistance on the part of the Mayor and Comptroller will prevent the mischief from going further than it has already extended.

Convenient Orators.

There is a town in Massachusetts called Westfield. This is a piece of intelligence for which we expect our readers to be grateful, for, we venture to say, there is not one in ten of them ever heard it before.

Yet, it is a pleasant town this of Westfield. Westward its fields slope in the sunlight—tall elms shadow its broad walks, its spacious greens, its square, its neat lawns. Whoever travels from Berkshire eastward, rejoices extremely at the sight of Westfield, for it is a godly and goodly place.

But the glory and majesty of Westfield lay in its whips. Whoever had been badly beaten in all lands added to the glory of Westfield, for Westfield made whips, as Gloucester makes cheese, or as Lynn makes shoes, and Westfield asks no questions after sale.

Nay, a rice crop has been the fuller for the whips of Westfield—nay, a cotton-hand has felt the string of Massachusetts' hide when he loitered in the furrows.

So it was but natural that when Westfield invited a distinguished speaker to address it, Westfield should expect an oration of the "regular sort." It is not your men of genius who are popular at once. But your men of whims, caprice, and energy, never lose sight of these qualities—they are the Roman cement of existence.

The occasion of the oration was the triennial meeting of the Westfield Annual Association; and the persons who invited Mr CURTIS to make the address to them were, of course, perfectly well informed as to the political opinions of that gentleman, and from his having done so last year in his orations before several literary associations, they had every reason to believe that he would again improve the opportunity of infusing his opinions into his addresses this year. But he was expected, it seems, to speak after the manner of other men, and to pass with them into the "dusky crypt of darkened things and faces." But Mr. GEORGE WILLIAM CURTIS objected. He had certain truths to speak, and he spoke them. Possibly he made overstatements. What of that? Was he not asked to say what he thought, and to say it as strongly as he could?

We learn from the Springfield Argus, that, when a vote of thanks was offered to the orator for his production and services, Mr. LOOMIS, of Boston, entered his protest against any thanks being offered to him, believing that a portion of the sentiments contained in his oration were unjust, uncalled for, and unworthy of being uttered before an educational association, made up of individuals from various sections of the Union.

The Argus volunteers the remark that "Mr. LOOMIS, by his well-timed remarks, administered a well-merited rebuke to the wolf in sheep's clothing, who thus avails himself of opportunities to scatter his higher-law doctrines, and law-defying sentiments." But the force of Mr. LOOMIS' objurgations will be somewhat lessened by the information which we gather from a Boston paper, that he is a Custom-House Officer, and his object was to make himself secure in his place.

Mr. LOOMIS protested—yea, even to the face of the wicked orator himself—against the vote of thanks usually administered to the orators of Westfield on festival occasions. Why should they thank Mr. CURTIS? Had he not outraged the name of the President, and spoken disrespectfully of the Attorney-General? Had he not inconveniently made a disturbance when he ought to have promoted peace, and sent everybody home kind and happy, and with a good digestion? This was the duty Westfield expected him to do. This duty all small towns expect of all considerable men. The Winter's lecture, and the Summer's oration, have become institutions, and all innovators upon them are nonconformists of the worst school.

What Mr. CURTIS said that so outraged the tender sensibilities of the Custom-House Officer, we are not yet informed. Probably the cruel operator means to try his electrical battery on other mortal men and women, before returning to the charge at Westfield. But whatever he may do, or not do—whomsoever he may bamboozle or not bamboozle, we may be sure that his operations will be well combined, and his oration, if he make one, worthy of himself and of the occasion, for to a powerful man, who is prepared for distinction, all events turn a golden side, and wears a splendor of hope that to a saturnine man seems inconceivable.

The New Commander-in-Chief in India.

The man who of all others was the fittest to have undertaken the suppression of the mutiny in India, and who was able to do more with Sepoys than any other General of his time, Sir CHARLES NAPIER, the conqueror of Scinde, is now no more. Ten years ago, when great danger threatened the Anglo-Indian Empire, all eyes were turned to him as the last and best card in a desperate game. The Sikh campaign was opened ominously on the bloody field of Chillianwallah, and the prestige the madcap impetuosity of Lord GOUGH had lost, the starner, though no less brilliant genius of "old CHARLEY" was called on to restore. Broken in health, crippled with wounds, with means impoverished during fifty years of active service, smarting under the ingratitude of the Company whose vast territory he had enormously increased, he, nevertheless, embarked at twenty-four hours notice, and during the short period in which he held the command of the army, though the fighting was over before he reached his post, he did incalculable service by his denunciations of the follies and abuses to which, there is no doubt, much of the present troubles owe their origin. NAPIER's comments upon the proceedings of many of the Courts-martial held during his last stay in India, and his farewell address to the officers on leaving it, were documents which any one who wants to study the causes of what is now taking place in Bengal, would do well to peruse. Coming from any other living man, those seething denunciations of folly and extravagance, of inattention to military duties, and of other objects of ambition than the comforts and efficiency of the regiment, would have laid the writer open to the charge of presumption, and his lessons to that of hypocrisy or exaggeration; but NAPIER's career from the day on which he fell with eight wounds in front on the heights of Corunna to that on which he won at Moodkee a battle to rank with Plassy and Inkermann, had been too nobly simple, and too terribly earnest, to make his preaching lack force or point. No man could so well advise a young soldier in active service as he who had seen half a century of war. None could ward a gay ensign of his dangers so effectually as the gray-headed veteran, who had grown great and famous by a life of labor, and hardship, and poverty. When he died, four years ago, in the old manor-house in Hampshire, with the colors of his regiment waving before his closing eyes, England lost the only man whom the public knew to be equal to every crisis which needed bravery, skill and judgment.

Sir COLIN CAMPBELL, we learn by the last mail, has been selected for the duty, for which NAPIER was chosen in the Sikh War. The Government has called on him to save India. Against him, it has been urged that, though he has seen a great deal of fighting, he has never yet had the opportunity of proving himself capable of conducting operations on a great scale, of conceiving wide combinations and leading them to a successful and concentrated issue. The facts are certainly all against him, but the presumptions are all in his favor. He has never commanded anything larger than a division, it is true, but there is not supposed to be a better General of division. He has been fifty years in the army, and has served in all quarters of the globe. So long ago as 1808 he was one of the forlorn hope at the storming of Badajos in the Peninsular War—an enterprise in which success was won by the loss of two thousand men out of the five thousand of which the storming party was composed, and all this in a breach not more than twenty feet wide. India, China, Australia, have all of them been, since Waterloo, the scene of services which place him among the first soldiers of the age. At Alma he led the Highlanders against the terraced batteries by which the slopes were lined, with a vigor which would have been admirable in a man of thirty, and was astonishing in a veteran of seventy. Dismounting from his horse, he put himself at the head of the brigade, sword in hand, in true Highland fashion, took off his cap and waved on his men to the assault, shouting out in a way that revived a thousand memories of the old glories of the clans, "Follow me, my lads! None but Highland bonnets here!" and climbed the heights amidst a rain of shot, and entered the batteries in a rush. At Inkermann he was not actually engaged, owing to the fact that he was performing the important duty which he was left to discharge during the remainder of the Winter, of protecting the town of Balaklava from all attacks on the side of Baidar, such as that of Gen. LIPRANDI on the 25th of October. On that morning he performed, with one of the Highland Regiments, an exploit which almost rivaled the charge of the Six Hundred, and which, if it was rash, at least proved the pluck of the men, no less than the confidence of the General. He received the first charge of the Russian cavalry—made before the Scots Greys had had time even to saddle their horses—in line, without even attempting to form a square, and repulsed them by three vollies, before they had approached within three hundred yards. Had the manœuvre not succeeded, he would, in all probability, have been tried by Court-martial for breach of the regulations; as it was he was gravely censured; but in war successful boldness is one of the tests of genius.

At the last assault on Sebastopol, after the attack on the Redan on the morning of the 8th of September had failed, his division was mustered to repeat the attempt at daylight on the following morning. It was composed of the flower of the British army, of the veteran troops who had marched up the slopes of the Alma—"comme des murailles vivantes," as St. ARNAUD remarked—but who by their position at Balaklava had escaped most of the Winter hardships. The retreat of the Russians during the night deprived them of the glory of the trial, and, in all likelihood, saved Sir COLIN CAMPBELL for a more important duty. A month afterwards he assembled his division in a hollow square on the heights of Camara, rode into the centre and took a last farewell of them, and, as he then thought, of active service, in a simple and manly speech, which moved two-thirds of the men to tears. His fifty years of battle and storm were closed, and they and he, he said, would march and fight no more together. The remainder of his life he intended to spend in retirement, and the next trumpet which should rouse him would be the last that would ever sound.

His promised repose has been rudely broken in upon, and though still a hale and hearty man, it is hard to believe that the responsibilities and labors of the task he has undertaken will not prove too much for him. Of his fitness for it, there can be no doubt. It is of far more importance for all the purposes of his present service, that he should be a man of vigor, energy, determination, and foresight, than that he should have directed operations on a large scale in the field. There will be no elaborate manœuvering between the troops and the mutineers. What is wanted in the General-in-Chief in India at present, most of all, is the art of inspiring confidence in those whom he commands. The importance of this quality in the present position of the European troops and residents, cannot be overrated, and no man possesses it in a higher degree than CAMPBELL. His personal popularity in the Army is immense. He unites the stolid endurance of the Anglo-Saxon with the fire of the Gael. There is no doubt that he would have been appointed to the Command of the Army in the Crimea after Lord RAGLAN's death, but for his notorious antipathy to the French, which he never sought to disguise, and which, with him, was no doubt a tradition of early life.

He goes out, one of the best of a grand generation, all of them spring from the people, and risen into eminence in spite of the cold shade of aristocracy. GOUGH and HARDINGE and SMITH and NAPIER, and most of the heroes of the Peninsular war, and of the recent campaigns in India, were men of comparatively obscure origin and small means. They were produced by a great crisis, and after long lives of toil and success, have mostly disappeared. CAMPBELL is one of the last, and is, in many respects, the noblest Roman of them all.

A TEN-STRIKE FOR TAX-PAYERS.—Deputy Sheriff VULTEE, with his accustomed suavity, yesterday levied upon certain City property to answer an execution against the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty, on a judgment of one hundred and ninety-nine thousand and two dollars. The lucky suitor is ROBERT W. LOWDEN, who sued the City for the price of his alleged sale of a market site. The referee on whose report the judgment was entered, is Hon. DANIEL E. SICKLES. The attorney for the plaintiff is JAMES M. BARBOUR, Esq., and that for the defendant RICHARD BUSTEED, Corporation Counsel. That the plaintiff should sue is not astonishing; that the referee should give judgment is not remarkable, because, undoubtedly, the necessary evidence was furnished, but that (as we are informed is the fact) the Corporation Counsel should allow the time for an appeal to absolutely and irrevocably pass, and thus make a Special Term judgment final is a matter which, if true, calls for serious investigation.

Death of James C. Dobbin.

The sad forebodings with which the friends of the late Secretary of the Navy bade him farewell on his departure from Washington for home in March last have been realized. JAMES C. DOBBIN is no more. The mournful intelligence will be received with unfeigned sorrow wherever the American flag floats—for the name of the illustrious deceased was honored throughout the Mercantile as well as the National Marine. In the Navy—over whose interests he presided during the Administration of President PIERCE—he was respected and loved by all. It may be doubted whether any other Secretary of the Navy ever became so popular in the service as he, or was followed in his retirement by such sincere regrets. Mr. DOBBIN was little known, in this section of the Union at least, until he entered the Cabinet of President PIERCE, although he had previously served a term in Congress. During his administration of the Navy Department he was distinguished by the boldness of his attacks on long-standing abuses, and the earnestness of his recommendations for reforms calculated to elevate the standard of the American Marine. When he entered upon his duties he found it almost impossible to obtain men to man the national ships. Looking for the cause of this difficulty, and a plan of relief, he soon saw the necessity of holding out to the sailor some encouragement, in the way of more pay, better treatment, and rewards for long and faithful service. His recommendations to that effect were, in part, adopted by Congress, and the result is an abundance of seamen, of a much better class than were found on board our national ships four years ago.

Others of his suggestions remain unacted upon, but the advancing tide of public sentiment is sure, at no distant day, to give them success, and so add to the laurels adorning his tomb. To corporeal punishment he was always decidedly opposed, and to his earnest and unyielding hostility to every effort for its restoration the Navy is indebted for the fair trial which the experiment of its abolition has received. In all his official acts, Mr. DOBBIN was governed by earnest convictions of duty, which no personal considerations could induce him to evade in the slightest degree. Among the noblest marks which he left behind him are the six new steam frigates, authorized upon his suggestion, and constructed under his direction. The fulfillment of the order of Congress in that connection was to him a matter of deep concern, and he gave it the most careful personal attention. No detail of the models or plans proposed escaped his attention. The result of his supervisory labors was the production of vessels which do honor to the American name wherever they are found.

In manner, Mr. DOBBIN was exceedingly affable. His amiability of disposition won all who were brought in contact with him; and even those officers who are most aggrieved by his agency in the establishment of the Naval Retiring Board, never fail to speak of him with profoundest respect. During the last year of his public service, he was troubled much by a bronchial affection, resulting in complete loss of his voice. He was urged by personal friends to retire from labor and seek relief in a more genial clime; but his earnest desire that the Cabinet of which he was a member should remain intact until the expiration of the Administration impelled him, to remain at his post, until, as the result proves, it was too late. He returned to Fayetteville, N. C., after the inauguration of Mr. BUCHANAN, where he has been rapidly sinking, and on Tuesday last died. If we mistake not, he was about forty years of age. His wife died a number of years ago; but he has left several children—some of them quite young—to mourn their irreparable loss.

I. O. OF O. F.—The annual election of the Grand Lodge of Southern New-York was held last evening. The largest number of votes was polled that has been cast for several years. The result was as follows:

J. C. Graham, of No. 35	149

FOR GRAND SECRETARY:

John J. Davies, of No. 1	292
F. W. Harring, of No. 190	51
M. B. Pitts, of No. 41	43

FOR GRAND TREASURER:

Jacob Russell, of No. 28	28

FOR GRAND REPRESENTATIVE:

John G. Taylor, of No. 1	[illegible]

Mr. STUART, of Wallack's Theatre, (with whom, luck and luck appear to be connected terms,) has started under auspicious [illegible] public last night, assisted by his lady and [illegible] DION BOUCICAULT. The time is a musical festival, appealing to a very large class in a very popular way, and at unusually popular prices. It is designed, we fancy, to turn both the most of Mr. [illegible] undertakings, unsuccessfully and vexatiously. The experiment certainly deserves that result, and has attracted with it last night.

The Academy of Music has been fitted up in an effective manner, and those who are displeased by promenade will, on most occasions, have ample opportunities for doing so, although the crowd seemed it a little difficult last night. The position is not yet solved whether our audiences have yet arrived at a perception of the advantages of listening to music on their legs like the Englishmen, or whether they indulge a preference for chairs and [illegible] in accordance with their [illegible] The programme of the first night of the Opera season presented a meagre appearance, and was [illegible] loudly avoided. This was to be regretted, for notwithstanding it is more pleasing to the eye than the [illegible] of a well-dressed crowd. Several hold dashes were made last night in the right direction, and notwithstanding JULLIEN's failure, we believe that Mr. STUART will finally succeed in making the [illegible] fashionable.

Nothing can be more picturesquely beautiful than the appearance of the house as it first strikes the spectator on entering from the lobbies. It is in itself one of those peculiar treats which can be afforded only in a city of wealth and refinement. The magnificent proportions of the Academy, heightened by the perspective afforded by the open stage, ornamented with an orchestra which blazes like a gem in its centre, and rendered radiant by masses of gay millinery and pyramids of happy faces, present a spectacle of peculiar fascination. The decorations of the house have been executed under the direct superintendence of Mr. BOUCICAULT, a gentleman of taste and judgment in such matters. He has certainly been eminently successful in producing a coup d'œil of surpassing loveliness, without, in the least degree, sacrificing the practical requirements of this species of entertainment. There is ample room for promenading, resting, taking refreshment, reading the news, and the hundred other things which are therefore expected to be done at promenade concerts.

The orchestra (which is extremely limited) numbers a hundred and twenty performers, and is backed up with a large Cathedral organ from the manufactory of Mr. HENRY ERBEN. The musical forces are divided equally into choristers and instrumentalists, the former being placed below the ladies, and presenting a pleasing contrast by reason of their white dresses. The vocal department is intended, we presume, to be the leading feature of these entertainments—a novelty, if not an improvement on Promenade Concerts in general. Of eleven pieces in the programme last night seven were vocal and four instrumental. This, in our opinion, is more than a fair proportion. The instrumental pieces should predominate, because they alone are useful for promenade purposes. Moreover, novelties must have a fair trial before their merits can be determined, and the "Choral Opera," as it is styled, presented last night, ceased to give general satisfaction. It is certainly a happy idea to give the best promenade pieces from the best operas, and it can be done well with this powerful orchestra and chorus under Mr. STOUPAT's direction.

The programme opened with MEYER's [illegible] old-fashioned overture to the Chasse du Jeune Henri. After which the pieces were announced in the following order: 2. "Il Miserere," from the last act of "Trovatore," excellently rendered in every respect. 3. Ballad, Miss STROH, a very pleasing singer, and Signor ARNOLDI; 4. The "Hypocrisy Waltz," closely and gracefully played, and one of ROSSINI's best compositions; 4. The Brindisi from the "Sonnambula" (Solos by Mlle. STROHCH and Signor ARNOLDI); 5. Song, "We met by chance" (sung tunefully by Miss STROH, too slow, and as if she did not understand the words); 6. Entrepas, from "Les Huguenots," a barking composition of Quadrille from "Kreutzer;" 8. Scottish Melody, sung by Miss Agnes ROSENBERG in character, and honored with a double encore; 9. Scottish Ballad, "Sonnambula," pleasingly and artistically sung by Miss STROHCH, with full orchestra and chorus; 10. Comic German Quadrille, capitally rendered and encored; 11. Goodwood Galop by the orchestra.

The conductor, Mr. STOUPAT, is a young man, who has waited patiently for his opportunity, and seems determined to improve. He displayed some of the very best qualities of a conductor last night, and kept all his forces in complete control. There was not a single hitch in the performance, and some of the operatic ensembles were given with a degree of precision that puts to shame some more pretentious efforts of last season. New-York has certainly found a new and valuable conductor in Mr. STOUPAT.

When the doors were opened, there was a rush which completely flooded the house, and swamped the reserved rights of the fifty-cent patrons. During the evening the aisles and balconies became densely crowded, but the motion of the promenaders kept the house cool and comfortable. The experiment of a cheap and good musical entertainment has, we think, resulted in complete success. Nothing has ever been attempted in New-York half so good, at double the price. We trust that Messrs. STUART and BOUCICAULT will be amply rewarded for their enterprise.

The Rival Street Commissioners—Present Situation of Affairs.

There is considerable misapprehension as to the bearing of Judge DAVIES' decision in refusing to grant a mandamus last Tuesday. The issue of his decision in the matter was in order to afford sufficient time for Mr. DEVLIN to show cause why the alternant should not be granted, and proceedings were thereupon merely postponed until Saturday.

Judge INGRAHAM's decision in the Devlin Sessions case does not at all affect Mr. CONOVER or his rights, but simply releases Mr. DEVLIN from arrest. The question of right to the office has not come before Judge INGRAHAM; he had necessarily to assume that the Governor of the State had no power to appoint, and that, in consequence, Mr. CONOVER had no legal title to the office, or he could not have shown that Judge PEABODY possessed no jurisdiction in the premises. The Contempt case will be argued on Saturday before him, and he will probably give their decision on the Injunction.

As regards the release of Mr. DEVLIN, by Judge INGRAHAM, it is highly probable that the motion for his discharge would have come from Mr. CONOVER's counsel next week, and the Judge's decision has consequently, merely hastened matters.

Mr. DEVLIN declines stating anything as to his movements whilst nominally under charge of the Sheriff. He says that he has not passed his nights at home, and thinks it is nobody's business as to where he did pass them. He is emphatically non-committal on the subject, and would give no information to the NEW-YORK DAILY TIMES, while he established as by announcing as having to advocate CONOVER's claim all along." Whilst under the above said nominal custody of the Sheriff, Mr. DEVLIN has merely attended to his own private business, and has not attempted to interfere with anything connected with the Street Commissioner's office.

Mr. CONOVER has transacted the business of the Department without interruption for some time, parties having had full access to the books and papers and all other required facility. He has, also, obtained a complete new set of books, and in these all his transactions have been entered from the time of his appointment. He has not, hitherto, done any official thing in connection with the Department.

Mr. FIELD has been out of town for some time, but returned yesterday.

REPUBLICAN MEETING IN THE ELEVENTH WARD

RESOLUTIONS.

A Rhetorical Letter from Mayor Wood.

A large meeting of the Democrats of the Eleventh Ward and others opposed to the acts recently passed by the Legislature, and in favor of their repeal, was held last evening in the hall over Union Market, in Rivington-street.

JAMES BRIGGS, M. D., occupied the chair, and the following list of officers was presented to the meeting, and unanimously adopted:

VICE-PRESIDENTS.

Eleazar A. Asher,	Jacob Schneider,
Patrick McGuire,	Frederick Gaspah,
Nathan Reed,	John Lerner,
John Donnelly,	Michael Scanlon,
Gilbert Weiler,	John Herr.

SECRETARIES.

Thomas Hughes,	Louis Schlamp.

The following letter of apology for being absent was read from Mayor Wood:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, New-York, Aug. 4, 1857.

DEAR SIR: Your invitation to attend and address a meeting of citizens opposed to the unjust and iniquitous laws recently passed by the Legislature, would be heartily responded to if I could act with the true patriotism for the good of the people of any statesman in such meeting.

I do not desire to be frigid, yet in the dignity of the position of Mayor, for the officer to address the public meetings of a political character, but I should be recreant to my duty if my mere notice of propriety prevented a free expression of opinion upon a subject so intimately connected with the welfare and liberties of the people of New-York.

It is needless to say I am sympathetic with the general indignation against those iniquitous enactments, which exist, or should have been throughout the Union, when with all our boasted liberty and equal rights, we have allowed and tolerated the existence of such laws, and shall never cease opposition until these are stricken from the statute books and they are consigned to the oblivion they so richly merit as a nominal, political death.

Therefore, citizens of the Eleventh Ward, so eminently distinguished in the fight against tyrannical laws, I implore you to stand firm in this contest.

As a political party, we have a right to be an honest party, if we must, you not only resist their enforcement, but carry the standard even into the Stock Repudiation Active field.

Very truly, FERNANDO WOOD, Mayor.

To Messrs. Rochford & Co., Committee, &c.

Loud cheers were given for Mayor Wood.

The following resolutions were then read and unanimously adopted:

Whereas, The political and civil rights of the City of New-York have been grossly trampled upon by the Legislature of this State, in the enactment of laws repugnant to the feelings of our citizens, insulting to the position and to power of the Metropolis of this Union, and demanding the severest censure of all who value and regard their local and fundamental rights and privileges; and

Whereas, It has become necessary that the various Wards should rise in their might, and, by expressing, vindicate their claims as a free and sovereign people; and, seeing how the privileges to which the citizens of the Eleventh Ward are entitled to and are, by the arbitrary and tyrannical laws forced upon our people by a treacherous and unscrupulous Legislature; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the Democratic citizens of the Eleventh Ward, do hereby most emphatically protest against the oppressive, unjust and obnoxious laws relating to the local affairs of the City, as passed by the last corrupt Legislature—more particularly the Metropolitan Police Act and the Excise Act—as contrary to the principles of freedom, calculated to break down the Conservative and Democratic Party, destroy peace and peaceable disposition, and to create feud and hatred among our citizens.

Resolved, That we do heartily endorse the action of FERNANDO WOOD, the Chief Magistrate of this City, in his recent efforts to disenthrall the citizens of our from the yoke of oppression, and that we hail him as the leader of our municipal liberties and the guardian of our dearest local rights and privileges.

Resolved, That we most emphatically denounce the Republican Party as a sectional faction that has heaped all the miseries and outrages upon our people under which this City at present groans, growing out of the infamous local acts passed by the tyrannical power at Albany.

Resolved, That the Representatives of the Eleventh Ward are hereby instructed to aid, with their utmost power, the repeal of the oppressive laws which our citizens are now burdened, that the Empire City may once more be hailed as free and equal in its political rights as every other city of the Union.

Resolved, That in view of the importance of the approaching State and Municipal Elections, we had hoped that the proposition made by the Democratic Republican General Committee, of which WILLIAM EMMET is Chairman, to an organization of which our EDWARD CROSWELL is Chairman, would have been accepted in a spirit of conciliation and compromise. That we believe almost the entire masses recognize the first named Committee as the true representative organization of the Democratic Party of this City, and that the so-called Cooper Committee is kept in existence for the purpose of serving the ends of demagogues and unscrupulous politicians, whose conditions have led to distracting the party and perpetuating feuds and dissensions therein.

Resolved, That we cordially indorse an I approve of the acts and policy of our President, JAMES BUCHANAN, especially in the appointment of that Pioneer of the National Democracy, AUGUSTUS SCHELL to the office of Collector of the Port of New-York. In that appointment he has given us an additional earnest of the sincerity of his National Democracy, and an evidence of the fact that as the people in his election rewarded an able and faithful public servant, so with this appointment he has recognized the service of a well tried soldier of the party one has always been found when wanting.

Dr. A. J. CHARLEY, of Schenectady, was then introduced to the audience. He said that in meetings like these lay the safety and the perpetuity of our free institutions. During the last election, a party calling themselves Republicans, had stricken down with one blow our municipal freedom—taken the control of the police from the Mayor, invaded their rights, increased their taxes, and done other things which they now assembled to denounce. But he rejoiced that the Legislature had not taken from them their elective franchise, and he trusted that at the next election they would pass it, and wipe out this dark stain from the history of our City. The Legislature had forced upon the people of this City all acts which they would not choose themselves. Would SIMEON DRAPER ever be elected to an office in this City? [Cries of "No."] He wondered not that he (DRAPER) resigned from the police after seeing some of the results of his acts. Would General KIM have been the choice of the people? No. If the choice had been left to the people they would not have elected DANIEL D. CONOVER, but CHARLES DEVLIN for Street Commissioner. And the municipal authority did well in nominating him. These were facts. These were principles, and principles were eternal. The principles of the Democratic Party were eternal. The Republicans had fall related the cry of free speech, free Press and Parsons. But the first act they did when they came into power was to take the liberty from a fellow citizen. FERNANDO WOOD had used every means he had spared neither money or influence to secure them from the injuries which the Republican Legislature had forced upon them. They would, he hoped, sustain FERNANDO WOOD, as he had stood by them in the hour of their greatest need.

Dr. CHARLEY alluded to the poor men, and assured them that his tenderest sympathies were enlisted in their behalf. The Democratic platform, said he, is the one on which every adopted citizen, every person who loves our free institutions and desires their perpetuation, and every person who wishes to see this glorious country grow and flourish, should stand. These are the principles which they had assembled this evening to perpetuate—principles which every boy should learn from his childhood, which every mother should teach to her children, and which every father should bequeath to his sons. [Applause.]

Dr. CHARLEY concluded amid loud applause, after having admonished his audience to do their duty at the next election.

Three cheers were given for Mayor WOOD.

Mr. KELLOGG, of the Nineteenth Ward, then addressed the audience at considerable length, denunciatory of the acts passed by the late Legislature. He amused them with many interesting and mirthful anecdotes, and concluded with an expression of the belief that they would beat their opponents even at the enemy's camp.

Councilman JONES, of the Forty-second District, next spoke. He was followed by Col. ALEXANDER MING and others, after which the meeting broke up.

Heavy Robbery of an Express Office.

From the Quincy Republican Aug. 1.

The office of the American Express Company, in this city, was entered last night, and one of the safes rifled of its contents, to the amount of from $3,000 to $10,000. The office is situated in the Kendall buildings, on the corner of Main and Sixth streets. Mr. TOUZALIN, the Agent, was in the office until 11 o'clock in the evening, and left everything secure.

This morning the front door was found locked as usual. The rear door, leading into the trimming-shop of WEAVER & MILLER's carriage factory, it is said, was standing open, and the west window raised. It is supposed that the burglars entered by the window, and from the shop into the office by the rear door; but other parties believe that the entrance was effected at the front door by means of false keys. The safe was rifled of its contents, and the papers scattered over the room. There was another and larger safe, also containing money, which was not entered.

The amount taken is variously estimated at from $3,000 to $10,000—we having been unable to obtain any intelligent information at the office of the company, relative to the matter. The money was put up in packages, and was to have been forwarded this morning by express. We did not learn the names of the parties expecting their remittances.

Senator Seward, seized for Debt, and a Constable runs away with "Old Hays."

Senator SEWARD was seized for a debt of something over two hundred dollars, while in the Governor's room, in the City Hall yesterday, by the authorities of the County, and soon afterwards "Old HAYS," the celebrated and highly respected thief-catcher, was pounced upon by a constable, taken away and incarcerated in an auction store, notwithstanding the many appeals on his behalf, and earnest remonstrances of his friends, who happened to be present at the time. It is needless to add that the arrest of two persons, so distinguished, for the trifling sum of a little over two hundred dollars, created considerable feeling wherever it was known. The particulars of the case are as follows: Constable REAP held an execution of HAWKINS & GORDON against the City for the sum named. The Comptroller refused to pay, and consequently the constable determined to obtain the amount in some way, and if possible create a sensation at the same time. Seizing the Comptroller's favorite desk and chair had been tried too often already, to repeat it would not add to his reputation, so over he goes to the rooms of the clerk of the Common Council, and asks Mr. GALLAGHER, his gentlemanly and accommodating Sergeant-at-Arms, to allow him to visit the Governor's room, and "see the pictures." The Sergeant-at-Arms—only too glad of an opportunity to afford pleasure—produced the key and escorted the constable to the room. After looking around for a few minutes, the eye of the constable fell upon Senator SEWARD, who was hanging against the wall, and he declared his intention of taking him away.

The Sergeant-at-Arms demurred.

The Constable made his way to his office, and informed the gentlemen present that he had an execution against the City—yes, Mayor, had refused to pay, and that he was bound to levy upon Bill Seward as the easiest way of obtaining the amount of his claim.

The Sergeant still demurred. Senator SEWARD had cost the City one thousand in hard cash, (exclusive of his frame,) and he couldn't think of parting with him for an amount so trifling. He had been informed that Senator SEWARD was a good deal like a favorably located up town lot—rather on the rise; consequently, if he was to go, he (the Sergeant) thought he should bring a considerable advance on his original cost.

The Constable suggested that the best way to ascertain the public estimate of his value would be to sell him at auction.

The Sergeant could not deny that the plan suggested was a very good one to get at his real value; but then he did not think the City would like to part with him at any price; and he could not think of letting him go without the authority of Uncle David.

The Constable, after considerable coaxing, consented to let the Senator remain for the present. He would go below, and see what he could do there.

As soon as the Constable had gone out, the Sergeant-at-Arms followed, locked the door, and held the key with a firmer grasp.

The Constable next proceeded to the Mayor's Office, where he took an observation. But the inmates having obtained information of his business, pleaded with him not to remove the furniture there. He had a strong fancy for the Turkish gentleman who sits over the head of Colonel MING, but finally he yielded to their prayers and spared the Turk.

Leaving the Mayor's Office, he returned to the office of the Clerk of the Common Council, rather out of humor. Wandering about for some time, he finally reached the inner room, where he espied "Old HAYS" perched upon the wall. The heart of the Constable warmed when he beheld the venerable "Thief-Catcher." Here was one after his own heart—a genuine Constable, who had achieved much and become famous. He had an affection for his professional friend so strong that he could not think of leaving him. So up he got upon Uncle David's favorite chair, and down came Old HAYS. True to his instincts, however, in coming down, he leaned over considerably, and in doing so, succeeded in lodging a large quantity of venerable dust in the eyes of his admirer. The old gentleman evidently intended it as a joke, but the more youthful Constable could not (although he had it in his eye,) see it in that light. As soon as he could see, he seized Old HAYS, and with the remark that throwing dust in his eyes was a dirty trick, bore him off to the rooms of an auctioneer, by whose remorseless hammer the venerable Thief-Catcher is destined to be knocked down to the highest bidder, unless Mr. FLAGG's bowels of compassion move for his release.

Alderman BLUNT, who was present at the time, authorized the Constable to bid as high as $250 for him, in case of sale.

That Gold Box.

The Committee appointed to decide upon the evidence adduced as to who is the most fitting person to receive the gold box bequeathed by General JACKSON, have determined that it shall be given to Lieutenant-Colonel GARRETT W. DUCKMAN, formerly Captain of Company E, and subsequently Major of the New-York Volunteers.

The following are the claims upon which the award is based:

For having, from the landing at the Island of Lobos to the final surrender of the City of Mexico, the best disciplined company in the regiment, the men being always under the most thorough command and control.

For leading his company, on the first Sunday after the landing at Vera Cruz, as skirmishers on the sand plains near its walls, and taking position on the Orizaba road, holding that position while under fire from nearly all the batteries of the city, (within hearing of the enemy,) until after dark, when ordered to retire behind a sand hill.

For his having taken, on the succeeding evening, possession of the Orizaba road, and judiciously posting picquets, thus preventing all communication from that road to the city during that night.

For having taken a position with his company of 73 men in ambush, and within half a mile of 500 of the enemy, to prevent their entrance to the city, (the enemy, as before recited, could be distinctly heard giving orders,) and for performing constantly with his company scouting duty around the walls and roads of the city.

For engaging and sustaining a charge from 600 lancers, holding the position until relieved by Colonel WARD B. BURNETT, at Nueva Rancho.

For gallant service, equal to any other man or officer, at Sierra Gordo.

For leading his company in the charge at Churubusco, and remaining in advance of his command under the sharpest fire of musketry experienced during the war, where he fell severely wounded, thus setting an example of bravery for his men to emulate.

For devoting his time and attention to the discipline, comfort and interest of his men.

In never saying to his men "Go," when there was a chance for a brush with the enemy; but always saying "Come"—as he would never permit either officer or private, of his company to be in advance of him in action, or any other duty where he was in command.

Receiving the indorsement of his brother officers, senior and junior, of his conduct as a brave soldier, an officer and a gentleman, by electing him from the position of junior Captain to that of Major."

These statements were all verified before the Committee. The witnesses who were testifying to the merits of other parties incidentally alluded to Major GARRETT W. DUCKMAN. At that time he had made no application, but through his name being brought up in the way just mentioned, the Committee felt called to wait upon him, and begged him not to repudiate his claim. After some reluctance, he was induced not to do so. It is believed that the award will give very general satisfaction. The decision of the Committee was unanimous.

WESLEYAN UNIVERSITY—RESIGNATION OF DR. SMITH, AND ELECTION OF REV. DR. CUMMINGS.—At the annual meeting of the Trustees and visitors of the Wesleyan University, at Middletown, Conn., on Thursday evening, Dr. A. W. SMITH, LL.D., tendered his resignation, his health not being adequate to the onerous duties of the office of President. The friends of the institution will be pleased to learn that he still remains at the head of the Department of Mathematics, a place he has so long and ably filled. Rev. JOSEPH CUMMINGS, D.D., of Genesee College, was unanimously elected to fill the vacancy.

FATAL FALL.—An Inquest was held on Thursday at the New-York Hospital upon the body of TILOTS SLOCUM, a mason by trade, who died from injuries received on the 20th ult. The deceased was engaged in bracing up a ladder to be used as a scaffold, at a new building in West Thirty-third-street, when the brace fell to the pavement and deceased and the ladder followed. He was fatally injured and died on Wednesday night. The Coroner's Jury rendered a verdict of "accidental death." Deceased was a native of this City, 42 years of age.

FOUND DEAD.—LOUIS DE CHATTEL, a German vagrant, was found dead on Thursday morning in the main hall of No. 5 Broadway. Coroner CORNELY held an Inquest upon the body, when it appeared in evidence that deceased was of very intemperate habits and that death was caused by congestion of the brain arising from intemperance and exposure. A verdict to that effect was rendered by the Jury. Deceased was 43 years of age.

Academy of Medicine—August Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the New-York Academy of Medicine was held on Wednesday evening, in the small Chapel of the University, Dr. VALENTINE MOTT, President, in the Chair.

The Secretary of the Section on Theory and Practice, to whom was referred the subject of the National Hotel Epidemic, made a report, which was in the main the reading of the action of the Philadelphia College of Physicians and Surgeons, as published in their transactions, indorsing the views entertained by the Academy, of the miasmatic origin of the disease in question.

Dr. GAUSCOX then read a long report upon the subject of Yellow Fever, in its relations to this City. At previous meetings he had reported upon this subject, and had brought down the statistics to about the year 1850. The papers of this evening took up the subject from this period, and gave an authentic account of the origin, spread and mortality of the last epidemic at and around Fort Hamilton. The total number of cases was not more than 600, and the deaths about one third of that number. He then took up the theory of its origin, and requisitions for its spread, as proponded by Dr. BARTON and the Scientific Commission of New-Orleans. Our readers will remember, from our report of Dr. BARTON's late paper, read before the Academy, that his requisitions are putrid emanations coincident with a high temperature and a high dew point. The paper, while highly praising Dr. BARTON and his theory in the main, and not mooting the question of its correctness so far as New-Orleans was concerned, differed with it in some slight degree in its applicability to New-York. The writer did not believe that Yellow Fever could originate in New-York, and stated that in truth it never had as yet. It had been always distinctly traceable to shipping and the last epidemic was no exception to this rule. Neither was the alleged requisite of a newly upturned soil a requisite in New-York. We had had an immense amount of cellar-digging, street making, paving, hills cut down and valleys filled, some three hundred miles of excavations for water and gas pipes, one hundred and fifty miles of sewerage within a few years, and all not productive of cholera.

So far, however, as the hygrometric and thermometric requisitions are concerned, the theory of Dr. BARTON stands justified by the observations in this City.

The practical conclusions are these: Yellow Fever does not originate here in New-York, but it spreads when there is a union of high temperature and great moisture in the atmosphere. It can be entirely prevented by a stringent quarantine of all infected vessels. It can be alleviated when present by attention to the dryness of the City, thorough sewerage, pavement such as to prevent collections of standing water, quick lime in the streets, an abolition of cellar and basement residences, sunlight in shops, schools and dwellings. These precautions are available not only against Yellow Fever, but against Cholera, which always originated in basements, and dysentery, which there and in new damp houses became infectious.

Since writing this report, the speaker had received an official report of the rise and progress of the last epidemic of Yellow Fever in Norfolk, which Dr. BARTON stated had originated there, but which is here stated to have been unquestionably brought by the Sen. Franklin steamer, heretofore stated to have been clean, but now confessed to have had several cases of Yellow Fever on board, and several deaths before her arrival in Norfolk, a fact denied by her officers.

Dr. WATSON thought it illogical to assume that because it is proved that a disease was imported, it could not be generated in any locality.

Dr. J. M. SMITH said there was some reason in this. It is allowed by all that it generates in New-Orleans, may it not also in Mobile? If so, why not in Charleston? If there, does it at Norfolk? If at Norfolk could it not in New-York? Where is the stopping place?

Dr. GAUSCOX said it was easier to ask than answer questions, but the query ought to be continued, and say if in New-York, why not in Greenland and the North Pole? He did not himself believe that it was generated in New Orleans, but was imported from Havana, where it never died out; that it originated in a still hotter climate, and was a visitant from Africa, perhaps the Bulam Fever of the old writers.

This paper and the previous report were referred to the Committee on Publication.

The remainder of the evening was spent in a desultory discussion, in which many members took part, of the state of the Treasury, which forbid further publications of proceedings at present. Dr. SQUIB's paper on chloroform was reported upon by the Sections of Chemistry, &c., to which it was referred. A proposal that editors of medical journals may have access to any papers read to the Academy, and permission to extract from, condense, or publish entire such portions as they may choose. No decisions upon the questions were made at nearly 11 o'clock, when the Academy adjourned.

Marine Matters.

THE GREAT RACE ACROSS THE ATLANTIC.—The Persia, on her last trip, passed the Vanderbilt, en route to Southampton, on the 3d of August, at 8 A. M., in lat. 42° 26', long. 62° 56'; also, passed the Atlantis, en route to Liverpool, on the same day, at 9½ A. M., in lat. 45° 18', long. 63° 21'. At the time the Persia passed, the Vanderbilt was forty-two and the Atlantic forty three and a half hours from New-York, and if the above figures are correct, they must have run, on average, from fourteen to fourteen and a half miles per hour—very good traveling. The Vanderbilt was not more than thirty or thirty-five miles ahead of the Atlantic, which, considering the Vanderbilt's pretensions, is very creditable to the latter steamship.

THE SHIP WILLIAM M. ROGERS, OF BATH.—The following particulars of the foundering of the ship William M. Rogers, of Bath, Me., as previously reported, are furnished by Mr. WOODWORTH, of Richmond, Me., third mate of the vessel:

The ship left Liverpool, June 10, bound to New-York, with a cargo of coal for the Brooklyn Gas Company. Nothing particular occurred until the evening of June 20, about 9 o'clock. The wind at that time was blowing a heavy gale from the north, when she lurched heavily to the leeward and shifted cargo. They got the ship before the wind and sent all hands below to trim cargo. Shortly afterwards the ship broached to and the cargo again shifted so as to bring the rail under water. To save the ship, shoring heavily, they cut away her main and mizzen masts, got the head sail and tried to get her before the wind again; but all to no purpose, as she was completely waterlogged. Soon after she shipped a sea, which carried away the long boat, damaging it so much as to render it entirely useless. They held on to the foremast for fear of destroying the life-boat, which was upon the forward house. They then got the life boat ready to launch, put provision and water into it, when at that moment a sea struck the ship which washed the life-boat overboard.

The men got into the boat and endeavored to get it clear from the main and mizzen masts, which were washing alongside of the ship, in order to get round to the lee water; the boat was badly damaged, one side of the row-locks being knocked off, and it was full of water. Before they could get it bailed out and get up to the ship, she went down, bows foremost. This was about 3 o'clock in the morning. The mainmast had broken in the lee stanchions and plank shears of the ship, filling her with water and bursting up the hatches. This was the cause of her going down so suddenly. Mr. SAWYER, the first mate, had attended to getting the life-boat ready, and no doubt would have jumped into it, but he preferred trying to assist in saving the captain and the remainder of the men, who were all aft. It was impossible to get the boat bailed out and get up to the ship before she went down. The men saved were in the life-boat three days, when they were picked up by a British vessel and carried to St. Johns, N. F., where they were kindly treated. Such of them as chose to go home were forwarded to Portland in the steamship Cincassian, by the American consul. The following are the names of the survivors: James Woodworth, of Richmond, Maine; Jesse S. Robbins, Plymouth, Mass.; Edward Buxton, Wm. Watts, William McAdam, Christian Ettrup, Wm. Barnes, James O'Neil, John Brown, Mathyer Pellinger, Charles Jack, and two boys, names unknown. The first seven arrived in Portland in the Cincassian. The captain, first and second mates, and nine seamen, went down with the vessel. Not a vestige of the ship could be discovered by those in the life-boat after she went down. Capt. THOMPSON, who commanded the ship, was a highly-respectable citizen of Brunswick. Mr. SAWYER, the first mate, belonged to Portland, and was a very estimable young man.

☞ The American Institute, at its regular monthly meeting last evening, General HALL in the Chair, received a communication from Señor M. M. LLEDA TEJADA, of Mexico, accompanied by his works on monetary and commercial statistics and the history of Vera Cruz, the latter containing fine portraits of COLUMBUS and CORTEZ.

A resolution was offered in relation to sending a delegation to the Scientific Convention at Montreal, and another to send delegations to the various County and State Agricultural Fairs. Attention was called to a fine portrait, by Mr. BOURN, of the late THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN, Esq., who was, for eighteen years, the Corresponding Secretary of the Institute. The portrait was ordered by the Institute, and now adorns its rooms.

BURNED TO DEATH.—JOSEPHINE CRAWFORD, an Irish woman, 41 years of age, died on Tuesday, at Bellevue Hospital, from the effects of burns received a few days since while she was engaged in filling a lighted camphine lamp. An Inquest will be held upon the body.

Bloody Tragedy in Chester County, Pa.

From the Westchester (Pa.) Village Record.

On Saturday morning last, one of the most frightful tragedies occurred in Chester County which it has been our unpleasant duty to record, and which, indeed, we are glad to believe is rarely paralleled.

Early on the morning above mentioned, Constable LYNCH, of Westchester, in company with SILVOS LAYMAN, proceeded to execute a warrant which had been placed in their hands for the arrest of a man named WILLIAM BAUGH. BAUGH resided at what is called Marsville, on the Conestoga turnpike. BAUGH was charged with inflicting wounds upon a colored man with a pitchfork; this was the offence for which the arrest was to be made. The police officers arrived on the spot, at the residence of BAUGH, about 6 o'clock in the morning.

BAUGH was at the wood-pile cutting wood, with an axe in his hand, when they drove up in a light wagon. The officers alighted, advanced to BAUGH, who asked LAYMAN if he was an officer. LAYMAN replied he had some business with him, and LYNCH proceeded to read the warrant. At this moment LAYMAN advanced toward BAUGH, who raised his axe over his head, and with both hands brought it down upon LAYMAN, aiming at his head, but striking the collar of his coat, and penetrating his neck, inflicting a wound of the most ghastly and deadly character. The wound extended clear across the neck, and is described as three inches or more in depth. After inflicting this wound, he again swung his weapon aloft, to deal another blow, and LAYMAN, who sprung back, drew his revolver and fired to disable the right arm of his antagonist. The ball struck the helve of the axe, and glancing, grazed the shoulder of BAUGH, and passed his neck, just missing it, and grazing the chin. BAUGH then rushed on LAYMAN, a struggle ensued, LAYMAN threw him, and jumped upon his body and held him securely until constable LYNCH furnished a pair of handcuffs.

The struggle was long continued—some ten or fifteen minutes—and was of the most desperate character. Finally his hands were manacled, and he was forced into the wagon. They then drove rapidly toward Lionville—LAYMAN driving, and Constable LYNCH guarding the prisoner. After driving two miles LAYMAN became so much exhausted with the loss of blood as to require assistance—whispered to LYNCH that he must summon aid—as they were in the immediate vicinity of VICKERS' pottery. A colored man who was working in the adjacent field was called to, who came forward, but refused to render assistance when told that BAUGH was in the wagon. Perceiving their helpless condition, BAUGH determined to frustrate their efforts to obtain aid, and, with the desperation of despair, made an attack on LYNCH, who held a loaded pistol in his pocket. He seized LYNCH by the throat, and attempted to force him from the wagon. LYNCH drew his pistol from his pocket—BAUGH got hold of the pistol, but with the aid of LAYMAN it was recovered by LYNCH; BAUGH again seized the arm of LYNCH, making a desperate effort to regain the pistol, and the pistol in the struggle was discharged, and the contents entered the head of the prisoner, at the temple, and the ball lodged above the eye on the opposite side of the head. The wound was mortal—the prisoner was disabled—and the wagon again proceeded forward with all speed.

Constable LYNCH was the only party now not in a disabled condition—and he reached Lionville, covered with blood, with his dying prisoner and desperately wounded companion.

The sensation created in that quiet country village, on the announcements of such an arrival, may be more easily imagined than described. Horror seized the stoutest heart, and quickly the crowd gathered, and the bodies of the wounded men were removed from the vehicle to the hotel. The desperate character of BAUGH was well known to all the citizens; he had defied the local authorities, who had failed of an arrest—he had threatened that an attempt to take him should be sealed with blood; and now he was a captive before them, gasping his last, with his bloody threatenings awfully fulfilled.

Notwithstanding the horror of the ghastly spectacle, there was a mingled satisfaction that the law had been vindicated, and the highest feelings of admiration were displayed on all sides at the self-sacrificing heroism of the men who had peralled their own lives in their inflexible determination to execute their duty. Every one rejoiced that outlawry had not triumphed.

The wounded prisoner, BAUGH, died in about an hour after his arrival at the hotel.

The condition of Mr. LAYMAN yesterday morning (Monday) was as favorable as could be expected. He is entirely calm and collected. The danger is from inflammation in the wounded part and bleeding.

Trouble at Ephrata Springs—Fight between a Southerner and a Waiter.

From the Lancaster Express of Aug. 3.

On Saturday a difficulty occurred at the Ephrata Mountain Springs, which came near having an unpleasant termination. The particulars, as far as we have been able to gather them from the many flying reports in the matter, are about as follows: It appears that at the dinner table, after most of the boarders had retired, a gentleman named WHITE, from Baltimore, got into an altercation with one of the colored servants, who, he alleged, carried away his plate on which he had just ordered meat. The charge was denied by the servant, when high words took place between the two, which ended by the former picking up a tumbler and hurling it at the head of the latter. The servant evaded the flying missile by dodging, and directly made towards Mr. WHITE in a menacing manner, and struck him in the face, urged on, it is said, by the other servants in the room. The noise of the disturbance filled the room with the guests of the house, principally Southerners, who caught the servant and forced him from the room. Considerable confusion followed the tracks, and a meeting was soon afterwards called and attended by nearly all the boarders of the house; the proceedings, we hear, were conducted altogether by gentlemen from the South, of whom there are several hundreds at the Springs. Speeches were made denouncing the conduct of the servant in very severe terms, and even counselling violence to his person.

From all the statements which were made at the meeting, the sympathies of the crowd seemed very much in favor of Mr. WHITE, not only by the boarders from the South, but also from the North, and things were in a fair way for adjustment when a gentleman from Baltimore, whose name we did not learn, arose and made a violent speech, denouncing "free niggers" in general, and, very indiscreetly, we think, reflected sharply upon Pennsylvania and her laws. Previous to this the Pennsylvanians present said not a word; but for gentlemen from the South to come into the very heart of our State, and denounce its people and its institutions, was more than they were willing to let pass by in silence; and a gentleman from Philadelphia, whose name we were unable to learn, interrupted the speaker, and replied with much animation, vindicating Pennsylvania from the charges made by the "chivalric son" of the sunny South, and saying in very plain terms the Baltimorean did not tell the truth. The Philadelphian was backed up by others from the North, and then followed a scene of the greatest confusion, which threatened for a little while to lead to very serious consequences. But, fortunately, oil was poured on the troubled waters, and order was somewhat restored.

Since the affair which took place at the table, we learn the servant was wrongly accused. The plate of Mr. WHITE was removed, but by one of the other servants, who supposed he was through with his dinner, and the one accused passing Mr. W.'s chair at the time, was charged with carrying the plate off. We learn, too, on the other side, that the provocation on the part of the servant was almost unbearable, he calling Mr. W. "a liar," who had his place between two ladies at the time.

Much excitement existed, and ill-feeling was felt during the day and evening, the Southerners demanding the expulsion of the servant from the house; and threatened that, if he appeared at the tea table, he would be severely dealt with. The servants of the house also held a meeting, and resolved, if he was expelled, to leave the establishment in a body.

The matter continued in the same unsettled state until some time yesterday, when the servant left the establishment, in such a way as to satisfy the others, and at last accounts all was quiet at the Springs.

The above account we publish as we have it from a number of persons who were present at the time. As to who is in the wrong, we have no opinion to venture. We believe this is the first difficulty that has ever occurred at this well-conducted place of Summer resort, and will only say that difficulties will sometimes happen "in the best-regulated families."

Remarkable and Horrible Death.

From the Albany Evening Journal.

A man named CARL HAUSS, while felling trees at Knowlton's Mills, on the Berlin Mountain, Rensselaer County, came to his death as follows:

He proceeded to the woods, and, as was shown by the testimony upon the inquest, felled one tree, which stripped clean. He then cut down another, which, in falling, lodged in the branches of a sapling, some thirty-five feet high. This he cut down also, when both fell, and lodged in a still smaller sapling, standing near the trunk which he had felled and stripped. He proceeded to cut this down also, standing as he did so upon the fallen trunk. When the second sapling was nearly cut through it gave way, from the strain upon it, and the three trees together came down upon HAUSS, striking him in the back, and prostrating him at full length upon the fallen trunk. Upon this, protruding for several inches, was a sharp knot, and as HAUSS fell, his head struck upon it, near the centre of the os frontis.

So great was the force with which he was pressed down, by the weight of the falling trees, that this knot was thrust through his head from the forehead back, and such was its velocity, that he was pushed upon it until it had cut through the head, which it severed entirely from the scalp to the vertebræ of the spine,—the neck being dislocated. The head was then cut into halves, which lay open on either side, hanging at the back only by some fragments of the scalp and integuments. The brains and broken scalp had bespattered the trunk of the tree, and the ground in the immediate vicinity. There was no semblance of humanity left in the features of the unfortunate man, so horribly had he been disfigured. The verdict of the Coroner's Jury was "Accidental Death."

WINE TRADE.—A correspondent, writing from Oporto, under date of June 6, informs us that there are no kinds of Port wine, which can be purchased for less than $160 per pipe, even this of miserable quality. Ordinary wines are selling for $180 to $250 per pipe. Old tawney wines are very scarce, and worth from $350 to $500 per pipe. Bottled wines are sold at prices varying from $5 50 to $10 per dozen. There are no wines in the kingdom of any description that can be bought for less than $350 per pipe that will admit of the long voyage to America, and anything under $500 per pipe is of a very poor quality. The disease of the vine is still progressing, and I fear that there will be very little wine made this year. Thousands of vines have died, and have been rooted up. Merchants and farmers in this quarter have lost all hopes of the present vintage. In consequence of this state of things many of the leading houses state in their circulars that they have been obliged to advance the prices of their shipping wines from £50 to £70 per pipe, and are not willing to ship at a lower price.—Wash. Union.

MARKET REPORTS.

STATE OF TRADE.....Carefully reported for N. Y. Daily Times.

NEW-YORK, Thursday, Aug. 6, 1857—4 P. M.

ASHES—Are in moderate demand, at steady rates. Pearls, $6 12½@$6 25; Pots, $7 75@$7 81½ ⅌ 100 lbs.

BOOTS AND SHOES—The demand is pretty brisk, coming, mainly, from South-western dealers. Stocks are fair, and factors are free sellers, though there is no disposition of oppression in prices, in view of the high rates which hides and leather are bringing. An auction sale of 1,600 cases of Boots, Shoes, Brogans and Rubbers occurred to-day. The lots offered were attractive in quality, and were purchased with avidity. The prices realized were quite satisfactory, especially at all the sales were on cash terms. We make some important changes in our regular quotations: Men's Russett Brogans, $1 12½@$1 50; Men's thick and Kip Brogans, $1@$1 20; Boys', 85c.@$1 10; Men's thick and Kip Boots, $2@$2 25; Boys', $1-50@$1 60; Youths', $1 12½@$1 20; Ladies' Calf, Kip and Split Boots, 90c.@$1; Misses', 65c.@$1; Children's, 40c.@60c.; Ladies' Calf, Kid, Goat and Patented Boots, 85c.@$1 12½; Misses', 67½c.@80c.; Children's, 40c.@62½c., ⅌ pair.

COFFEE—Is rather quiet, yet is firmly held. Java, 14½c.@17c.; Laguayra, 13c.@14c.; Jamaica, 12½c.@13½c.; Maracaibo, 13½c.@14c.; Rio, 10½c.@11½c.; St. Domingo, 12½c.@12½c.; Native Ceylon, 11½c. ⅌ lb.

COTTON—The demand is improving and prices are gradually advancing. The stock on hand is very moderate, and factors offer their supplies somewhat reluctantly, as they look for even higher rates.

NEW-YORK GRADE[illegible]

	Upland.	Florida.	Mobile.	New-Orleans and Texas.
Ordinary	12	13	13	13
Middling	15¼	15¾	15¾	15¾
Middling Fair	15¾	16	16¼	16¼
Fair	16	16¼	16¾	16¾

DRY GOODS—This branch of trade is manifesting increasing activity, arising, mainly, from the execution of orders received from Western and Southern buyers, who are arriving in this market, while many local jobbers are leaving the city for their trips to the country, with the warm weather, working against lively business movements, which there does not seem a little reservation. The supplies of desirable goods are very complete, and as upon holiden display, must conduce, hence in the future, the market is partially relieved from the oppressive influence of an undue eagerness to secure customers. Prices are generally well supported, and with the restriction of production, which the vigorous prices of the raw materials occasion, the market is favorable to steadiness, at least, in the value of desirable fabrics. The sentiment are now pretty busy. We have noticed several public sales during the week. Yesterday, Wakeman & Mosher opened the season with a package sale of Cloths, Linens, Shirtings, &c. The sale was numerously attended, and for nearly all the goods that sellers were, quite satisfactory prices were realized. To-day, HAGGERTY & Co. sold about 800 cases of Waltham heavy bleached Shecting. There was a large company in attendance, and the competition was decidedly brisk. The goods were of superior quality and finish, and all the jobbers present at the sale appeared quite eager to secure some of them. Yet the prices realized were not satisfactory, though the sale resulted more advantageously to factors, than that of the Pepperell Company's productions, which occurred a few weeks ago, and which was duly noticed by us. The range to day was 12¾c.@13¾c. for 6x4; 16½c.@17½c. for 7x4, which, probably, would have fared better, had it not been discovered while they were under the hammer, that Mr. PAGE (one of the firm by whose order the sale occurred) was bidding for them, a course strongly objected to by the jobbers, and defended by Mr. PAGE, as he stated he was acting on his own account, not as a party interested in working prices up, though he subsequently withdrew from the competition; 11½c.@12½c. for 4x4; 14½c.@15½c. for 5x4; and 23½c.@25½c. for 10x4. These rates fall 1¼c.@1½c. short of the prices current in private trade. The new tariff difficulties are being settled, gradually. Several of our importers having claimed that woolens delaines are liable only to 10 ⅌ cent. duty, the Secretary of the Treasury decided that they are subject to 24 ⅌ cent. ad valorem under the new law.

FLOUR AND MEAL—The market exhibits considerable vigor and buoyancy for State and Western Flour. The demand is fair, chiefly for desirable lots, needed by home dealers, and prices are well sustained, though inferior parcels, not suited to immediate requirements of the trade, are quoted heavy. The arrivals are moderate, as also is the stock on hand first. We hear of some speculation, but there is not much inclination to purchase for export. Sales, 7,750 bbls., in lots, mainly at prices within the annexed range:

Ordinary State	$6 25@$6 35
Straight State	6 47@ 6 50
Extra State	6 62@ 6 65
Superfine Indiana and Michigan	6 [illegible]@ 6 55
Superfine Ohio	6 40@ 6 60
Extra Indiana and Michigan	6 60@ 6 80
Extra Ohio	6 60@ 6 80
Fancy Genesee	6 85@ 7 25
Extra Genesee	6 85@ 7 75
Extra Minnesota	7 40@10 50
Canadian is doing better. Sales, 600 bbls., in lots, at $6 40@$6 75 for low superfine to very choice extra ⅌ bbl. Southern is rather more active, at old prices. The transactions since our last comprise about 1,500 bbls. low Mixed to choice Extra, at $7 45@$8 75 ⅌ bbl. Rye Flour is in demand, and is worth $4@$6 for Fine to Superfine ⅌ bbl. Corn Meal is quiet, yet steady, at $4 20 for Jersey, and $4 12½@$4 40 for Brandywine, ⅌ bbl.

GRAIN—Wheat is less abundant and is in better request at decidedly better prices. Sales: 11,600 bushels, including ordinary old Red Western Club at $1 41 @$1 44; good new White Southern at $1 65, and prime new Red do., at $1 65@$1 75 ⅌ bushel. Rye is inactive and somewhat nominal, at $1 07@$1 11 ⅌ bushel. Barley and Barley Malt remains as last noticed. Oats are in fair request, and are worth 65c.@66c. for Western; 63c.@65c. for State; 61c.@64c. for Jersey; 58c @64c. for Canadian; 58c.@63c. for Pennsylvanian, 54c.@56c. for Southern, ⅌ bushel. Corn is less active and is rather cheaper. Sales, 28,000 bushels, at 68c. for inferior to prime mixed Western, and 95c. for white Southern, ⅌ bushel. Other kinds are out of market, and are nominal in price.

HAY—About 500 bales River were purchased at 65c.@70c. ⅌ 100 lbs.

HOPS—Are salable and steady, at from 7c.@11c. for last year's crop, ⅌ lb.

IRON—Is reported quiet at old quotations.

LEAD—Appears as last noticed.

LIME—Rockland, 85c. for Common, and $1 10 for Lump, ⅌ bbl.

MOLASSES—The market continues depressed and languid. Porto Rico, 35c.@37½c.; Cuba Muscovado, 46c.@50c.; Clayed Cuba, 35c.@36c.; New-Orleans, in bbls., 40c.@70c. ⅌ gallon.

NAVAL STORES—Rosin, Tar and Crude Turpentine are unchanged. Spirits Turpentine is in good request, and is now quoted up to 47½c.@48½c. ⅌ gallon.

OILS—Linseed is salable and firm, at 71c.@79c. ⅌ gallon. Nothing really new in other kinds.

NEW-BEDFORD OIL MARKET—[For week ending Aug. 3.]—Sperm—We notice a fair demand in the market for Sperm, and quotations are fully sustained. The transactions of the week include sales of parcels amounting to 1,270 bbls., a large part at $1 [illegible], and the balance understood at an advanced price. Whale is in steady demand, and we notice a further advance in prices. We quote sales of 850 bbls., the balance of a cargo, at [illegible] runs, at 72c. ⅌ gallon: Wholebone—The transactions of the week include sales of 9,000 lbs. of Ochotak, the price of which the parties interested refuse to divulge.—Whaleman's Shipping List.

PROVISIONS—Pork is in pretty good request at full rates. Sales: 950 bbls., in lots, at $24 50@$26 50 for Mess, and $19 50 for Prime, ⅌ bbl. Cut Meats are scarce and nominal, at 11½c.@11¾c. for Hams, and 10½c.@10¾c. for Shoulders, ⅌ lb. Bacon is inactive, and quoted at 11½c.@12½c. ⅌ lb. Lard is moderately inquired for at former prices. The transactions since our last vessel: about 600 bbls. and tcs., mostly fair to prime, at 12½c.@12¾c. ⅌ lb. Beef is brisk and advancing. The last sale from our lake consist of 200 bbls. at $16 50@$17 50 for repacked Western Mess, and $18@$19 for extra Western do., ⅌ bbl. New Prime Mess Beef, $10@$11 ⅌ tc.; India Mess, $22 ⅌ tc. Beef Hams, $23 50@$25 75 ⅌ bbl. Butter is in demand, and is steady at 15c.@20c. for Ohio; 18c @21c. for common to very good State, and 22c.@24c. for prime to choice do., ⅌ lb. Cheese is dull and heavy at 9c.@10c. ⅌ lb.

RICE—Is in fair request and is firm, at $4 75@$5 75 for inferior to very choice, ⅌ 100 lbs.

SUGARS—The demand continues pretty brisk, and factors have any existing advantage. Sales since our last: 1,300 hhds. Cuba, &c., in lots, mainly at from 6c.@10½c., with an invoice of Manila, (comprising 8,000 bags, to be divided equally among five refiners,) at 9¼c., and 6 months' credit, ⅌ lb. For this invoice of Manila, which was owned in Boston, the factors had refused 10½c. ⅌ lb. before it arrived. Refined Sugars are moderately dealt in at, however, partially reduced prices. SQUARES' varieties are now quoted thus: Loaf, 12½c.; Crushed, 12½c.; Ground, 12¼c.; Circle (A) Crushed, 12c., ⅌ lb.

WHISKY—About 600 bbls. Ohio and Prison were procured at 31c. ⅌ gallon.

FREIGHTS—Continued dull and heavy. For Liverpool, Cotton, 3-32. 5d.@3-16. ⅌ bale; Flour, 4d @9d. ⅌ bbl.; Grain, 3d. ⅌ bush.; Beef, 5d.@9d. ⅌ tierce; Rosin, 4d. ⅌ bbl.; and heavy goods, 1s. 6d.@19s. 6d. ⅌ ton. For other ports proportionate quotations.

Review of the Albany Broadcast' Markets,

FOR THE WEEK ENDING AUG. 5.

FLOUR—This has not been a very busy week with our merchants. The demand has not been active, and buyers refused to operate to any considerable extent, except at a material reduction. This, and the depressing tendency of the news from Europe, has rendered the market more easy, forcing a slight reduction on certain brands. The stock here is not large; but the assortment is very fair. The following were the ruling rates at the close to-day:

Common State	$5 00@$5 50
Extra State	6 25@ 7 00
Common Canada	6 75@ 7 25
Extra Canadian	7 75@ 8 75
Common Ohio	6 87½@ 7 12
Extra Ohio	8 00@ 9 00
Extra Genesee	8 50@ 9 25

WHEAT—But little has been done in Wheat, notwithstanding holders have moderated their views to a marked degree during the past six days. The week here is light. There is no speculation feeling here, and millers buy only in such quantities as may be necessary to keep their mills at work from day to day. The sales have been about 10,000 bush. prime White Canadian, the last cargo sold being taken at $1 80, which is about the ruling rate for that description now. This is a decline of 10c. within ten days.

CORN—Transactions in Corn have been greatly restricted by the Albion "break," which for several days left us without a single arrival, and more recently by a defect in a lock about twenty miles west of the city, which detained eastward bound boats nearly forty-eight hours. The sales of the week do not exceed 40,000 bushels Western mixed, the last sale being at 55c. afloat, and 59½c.@60c. at the Eastern depôt.

OATS—But little has been done in Oats owing to the limited receipts. The only sales we have to report are 6,000 bushels Canadas at 60c. measure, and 1,500 bushels State at 63c. measure.

MALT—We have but one sale of Malt to report—1,500 bushels, made from Canada barley, a nice article, at $1 20 ⅌ bushel.

BARLEY—There have been several samples of Barley of this year's growth (one from Canada) shown on 'Change. Some maltsters already evince a disposition to contract for September delivery, but the terms, if any bargains have yet been closed, have not transpired. At present, there is considerable speculation as to what will be the price paid on the first cargoes. The "Bulls" talk as high as $1 20@$1 30 for good four-rowed, and the "Bears" as low as $1 15@$1 20. We are inclined to believe that the lowest figures are nearest the mark, although much will depend on the time of the first arrivals. If cargoes should be held back until the 10th or 15th of September, and the weather then be favorable for malting, the highest figures may be obtained for the first installment. If, on the contrary, loads should reach here two weeks or so earlier, and the weather be a little too warm, the inside quotations will rule. The crop is larger than usual, but the demand, we think, will be proportionately greater. We understand that in some of the western counties the crops are being bought up at $1 ⅌ bushel, deliverable on the canal. Last year, as early as Aug. 14, car-loads were sold here at $1 27@$1 30 ⅌ bushel; Aug. 22, four-rowed, at $1 30; and Sept. 1, 10,000 bushels were sold at $1 31½@$1 33; Sept. 12, $1 32@$1 35; same date in 1855, $1 20; same date in 1854, 88c., and in 1853, 90c.

RYE—We hear of nothing doing in Rye. In the absence of sales we quote nominally at $1 10 ⅌ 56 lbs.

Crop Prospects.

The Chicago Press of the 3d inst. says: "A gentleman from Southern Illinois, with whom we conversed on Friday last, a man fully competent to judge in such matters, assured us that the average yield of all the grain crops in the Southern half of the State will be much larger this year than ever before. Wheat will range from 30 to 40 bushels to the acre, and barley, rye and corn in about the same proportion above that average. Another gentleman, who resides in Winnebago County, the very highest authority in such matters, assured us at the same time that the yield of wheat in that county this year would average from 25 to 30 bushels per acre. All this corresponds perfectly with our information from other portions of the State. Attempt to disguise the fact as certain croakers may who, in view of their predictions last Spring of an inevitable famine and financial collapse in the West, are exceedingly 'tender footed' just now, the evidence of unusual yield from an unprecedented breadth of ground is incontrovertible."

The Milwaukee paper reports that: "From all that we can learn, both by newspaper intelligence and that derived from conversations with farmers, the crops in this State will go above the general average this Summer. Everything looks magnificently now, with the exception, perhaps, of Corn, and that is coming on rapidly and hopefully. The Wheat crop will soon be garnered, and then will commence a new reign of activity in many of the villages and cities of the State, which are more or less dependent upon the Grain trade, and which are anxiously waiting for the prosperity which is certain to follow a bountiful harvest. In some parts of the State they have already begun to get in the new Wheat, and by next week they will have commenced nearly everywhere.

■ The cost of sundry new church edifices, now being erected in Philadelphia, is $204,000. This is exclusive of the Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul, going up in Eighteenth-street, the corner-stone of which was laid in 1846.

OFFICE OF THE HOUSATONIC RAILROAD CO., BRIDGEPORT, June 26, 1857.

NOTICE TO BONDHOLDERS.—THE COUPONS due on the 1st proximo on the Bonds of this Company will be paid on presentation at the office of KETCHUM, HOWE & CO., in the City of New-York, or at the Treasurer's office, in the city of Bridgeport.

At the annual meeting of the Stockholders in February last, it was resolved to pay off in cash $50,000 of the outstanding Bonds falling due Jan. 1, 1858, from the net income of the Road, in 1857, and to create a new issue for the balance, bearing date Jan. 1, 1858, of $350,000, which should retain the same perfect security which had been given for the original issue. To effect this object, a new issue of bonds was decided to make $50,000 payable Jan. 1, 1859, and $50,000 annually thereafter till Jan. 1, 1863 and this will cash the whole mortgage debt within the period prescribed. In pursuance of this resolution, the new Bonds have been prepared and already negotiated, to the amount of $300,000, which exchange leaves $50,000 of bonds which have been cancelled, and charged off, leaving $1,050,000 yet to be exchanged or otherwise disposed of. Holders of the remainder of the old Bonds are invited to examine the new issue, and to exchange for them their old Bonds, should they feel disposed, and on such terms that the investment will pay them 8 per cent. per annum. The other Bonds being payable at sundry dates, it will be seen that those who continue their exchanging will have a better choice now as to the time during which they may wish to continue the investment than by deferring it to a later period.

Application can be made with Messrs. KETCHUM, HOWE & CO., of New-York, or with the undersigned at Bridgeport. H. NICHOLS, Treasurer.

THE NEW-YORK CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY.—TREASURER'S OFFICE, ALBANY, July 28, 1857.

THE LATE MURDERS.

Inquest on the Mulberry-Street Case.

THE LATE TRAGEDY AT NAVESINK.

Was Moses Murdered? and if so, Was it by Donnelly?

The Body Exhumed, and another Autopsy Made—Singular Facts and Inferences—The Defence that is to be Made.

The community, though full-fed on horrors daily, cannot have forgotten so soon how it was startled the other day by the shocking tragedy at the "Sea View House," Navesink, N. J. About 3 o'clock in the morning of Saturday, Aug. 1, a female in the house saw ALEXDR S. MOSES, one of the barnekepers, running wildly about one of the upper landings, with blood streaming from his throat. She ran screaming through the house in great affright. The inmates were all alarmed, and on learning the cause of the disorder, the greatest excitement prevailed. MOSES was conveyed to his room, when a ghastly wound was found in his throat. The flowing blood was stanched as well as could be, when the wounded man stated that he had set up the previous night, gambling with JAMES F. DONNELLY, the book-keeper, of whom he had won nearly $50. This income, with other sums received at the bar during the day, he had placed between the mattresses of a bed in a room adjoining that in which he slept. Just before daylight he was awakened by a noise in his room, but before he had become entirely conscious he was assaulted in the throat with some sharp instrument. Jumping up and turning round, he saw DONNELLY leaving his room. He then got out of bed, ran into the passage way (as before stated) and gave the alarm. Immediate, thus alarmed, was attended by the inmates.

There was no physician in the house, nor in the hotel near by, though in both establishments there were several hundred guests. Freehold was a long way off and not easily got at. A gentleman suggested that the City of New-York could be easily reached, and that the better way would be to send to it for aid, mentioning at the same time that Coroner COSGRAVE was an experienced surgeon, and might on his arrival take also the deposition of the wounded man, in case his death was considered probable. This suggestion was noted on, and some hours thereafter Coroner COSGRAVE was by the bedside of MOSES, whose wound he dressed. Then summoning a volunteer Jury, he took the dying man's affidavit, which corroborated the statement which he had previously given. MOSES lingered painfully and died early Sunday morning.

An inquest was held upon the body by a magistrate of Monmouth County, and a verdict rendered that ALEXDR S. MOSES came to his death by having his throat cut with a disk in the hands of JAMES F. DONNELLY. The accused was removed to Freehold Jail, where he now awaits trial. No doubt of his guilt was entertained by any one acquainted with the facts of the case as published, notwithstanding from the very first he protested his innocence most strongly.

Within a day or two some singular matters in reference to this alleged murder have transpired, and many curious facts elicited, which tend to throw a doubt on the guilt of DONNELLY.

The friends of DONNELLY, strong in the belief of his innocence, were dissatisfied with the post-mortem examination which had been made, and were very desirous that a re-examination should be had by some well-known and competent surgeon, that the real nature and position of the fatal wound should be made manifest. With this view they called on Dr. THOMAS FERRELL, of Grand street, (lately appointed Demonstrator to the N. Y. University College,) and requested that he might make the desired re-examination. The Doctor explained the obstacles in the way, and besides the body had already been interred, and it was doubtful whether permission for its examination could be obtained. He consented to do all in his power however, and started on Monday morning with the friends to Freehold Jail, where DONNELLY is confined. DONNELLY was very much gladdened by the sight of his friends, and talked very cheerfully. He protested his innocence again and again, and expressed himself sanguine that when the facts of the case had been thoroughly examined before a Jury he would be honorably acquitted.

It may be well to state here that DONNELLY, the prisoner, is an educated, genteel young man, and had so far advanced in the study of medicine and surgery, that he was to have obtained his diploma within a few weeks. He was educated at Georgetown, Maryland, where he studied for the profession which he intended to follow. He studied also in Washington, and in Philadelphia. Being offered a situation as book-keeper at the Sea-View House, he accepted it, his means being limited, but he stuck close to his medical books during his leisure hours, and also attended lectures in this City. His struggles to attain a profession gained him the esteem of those who were conversant with them, and his pleasing and gentlemanly manners made him a general favorite.

DONNELLY states, that he arose, as he was accustomed to, about daylight on the morning of the murder, and proceeded to the office, opened the safe and prepared his account books for the day's business. He was afterwards going up stairs to put on his collar, (it was his custom to do this,) when he was startled by the outcries of ANN HARLEY, the servant girl. Looking up he saw MOSES on the landing, bleeding from the throat, upon which he was pressing his hands as if to stanch the blood. Horror-struck by the sight, he retreated down the stairs, where he met Mr. SMITH, the proprietor of the hotel, to whom he told what he had seen. He afterwards went up stairs with others, and when MOSES had been borne back to his bed, assisted as best he could in undressing and making the wounded man comfortable. He looked at the wound, and seeing that some of the larger vessels had been severed, asked for a fork to act as a tourniquet, by which to secure the bleeding vessels. But the excitement and throng was so great that no attention was paid to his request. Neither MOSES, who acted like a frenzied man, nor anything else, distracted the young man from the object in view, while the deceased was lying on his right side, and the carotid artery was severed, and the blood streaming. This fact shows that death must have ensued soon after the infliction of the wound, else he would have been seized with fainting, which he did not experience. DONNELLY, the murderer, saw this, but his interference was prevented by the excited guests and others in the house, and there was no one to assist him.

Beside the gash in the throat, there was a cut on the right arm, which, if not made by DONNELLY's friends, and thus made the strong point for the defence we his behalf—is there not a probability—a great probability, that DONNELLY is innocent of the murder? May not MOSES have been murdered by some one else,—some one with whom he had been gambling and from whom he had won money the previous night, (DONNELLY says that others besides himself were gambling with MOSES,) or may he not have taken his own life while laboring under the effects of delirium tremens, or some other temporary insanity. DONNELLY was a medical student,—a surgeon,—and would not have inflicted a wound so bunglingly. He would have known where to strike, so that death would have ensued immediately. As to the positiveness with which MOSES spoke of DONNELLY as his murderer, it is argued, that though the wound was given by another, who escaped, yet MOSES, awaking suddenly from his sleep under such shocking circumstances, might lay the deed upon the first man who he saw, or fancied he saw. And, if he did the deed himself, while temporarily deranged, how usual, it is asked, for the deranged party to imagine the deed to have been done by another, from whom he might have conjured up some form of violence? The wound found on the arm, it is further asserted, shows that a struggle took place, and that blood must have escaped upon the murderer's clothes. Yet no marks were found upon DONNELLY's clothes.

This is the theory of the defence. It is certainly a singular affair.

The Mulberry-street Murder.

The inquest in the case of the death of THEODORE L. TOMPKINS, who was injured on Saturday night last in an affray at No. 8 Mulberry street, was continued before Coroner CRANE, at the Town Hall, Hoboken, yesterday afternoon, at 4 o'clock.

Mr. J. DUNN LITTELL, Prosecuting Attorney for the County, assisted the Coroner in the examination of witnesses.

Walter H. Littlefield was the first witness called to the stand. He said: I reside at No. 23 Washington-street, New-York; I was at the place No. 8 Mulberry-street in the latter part of last Saturday evening; I think it was between twelve and one o'clock when I went there; I saw Mrs. Mitchell, Mr. Webb and one of the girls of the house when I went up; Webb was standing in the bar-room near the window; he appeared to be wild from the effects of the blows he had received; I did not see Mr. Tompkins that night; I saw Mr. Fraser fall down stairs, after which he crawled across the street, and fell down into a basement; he was pulled out of there by some man; I saw the barkeeper Simon behind the bar; I saw a white hat that night; I carried it down stairs from the bar-room, supposing it to belong to Mr. Webb; he told me that it was not his—that his was a black hat—and I then went back up stairs and got it; I handed the white hat to a man named Rice; when I went into the bar room Mrs. Mitchell told me that some one had been up there beating her brother; I did not see a club there; before Mrs. Mitchell kept the house the last time, I have seen a club there behind the bar; it was similar to a policeman's club; I saw the barkeeper strike Webb that night with his fist; the barkeeper had hold of him in the hall-way, hitting him, and trying to get him down stairs; Webb had hold of an iron railing; I have never noticed a German with light sandy hair and whiskers about that house; I heard a young man say that Tompkins had run away down Chatham-street; I think it was Mr. Rice who made this remark; Mr. Rice, I think, was the man who pulled Fraser out of the cellar; I did not see any one there that night carrying a small cane with a round head; my attention was first attracted to the house by hearing hallooing; the first one I saw after getting there was Mr. Fraser, who was just tumbling down stairs; when I went into the bar-room there were appearances of there having been a disturbance.

The white hat which was worn by TOMPKINS that night was here brought into Court and identified by witness as the one he found in the bar-room. There were a number of blood-spots upon the hat, and a cut of about an inch in length on the back part of it, nearly behind the ear, and close to the band.

Witness—I found the hat at the bar; Mrs. Mitchell was behind the bar at the time I got it; I did not hear the bar-keeper (Simon) say anything to any one; I have been acquainted with Mr. Webb a number of years; I never saw Fraser before that night to know him; I was slightly acquainted with Mr. Tompkins; I am positive it was Fraser who went across the street and fell down cellar.

James Mulvey, sworn—I reside at No. 62 Mulberry-street; I knew Mr. Tompkins by sight; I also knew Mr. Webb, but had never seen Fraser until last Saturday night; I was at the house of Mr. Mitchell, in Mulberry-street, last Saturday night, between twelve and one o'clock; I went there about five minutes after Mr. Littlefield did; I went up to the head of the stairs, but could get no further on account of the crowd; I saw Mr. Tompkins that evening about eight o'clock, but did not see him after that; I saw Webb and Fraser with him; I should think they were all sober at the time; when I went up the stairs at Mrs. Mitchell's, I saw Webb; the barkeeper had him by the throat, trying to get him down stairs; I saw the barkeeper strike Webb twice with his fist; I did not notice a club in the hands of the barkeeper; Webb was covered with blood; Mr. Corsair came up and got Mr. Webb down stairs; I saw Fraser first down stairs after Mr. Webb came out; I did not notice Fraser's condition, and did not see any one strike him; I went with Webb and Fraser to Monroe Hall; on Sunday Mr. Rice showed me a white hat, and said he thought it belonged to the young man who came down stairs and ran to Chatham-street; I saw Mrs. Mitchell standing by the bar-room door when I went up stairs; she did not appear to be in a fainting condition; I do not know any one who would be likely to give any information relative to this affray.

Sergeant Nathaniel T. Hicks, sworn—I am in command of the Police of the Sixth Precinct of New-York; I am acquainted with the house kept by Mrs. Mitchell; [the hat shown to witness:] this hat was brought to the Station-house on Monday, and has been in my possession since; I do not know the name of the young man who brought it to the Station-house, but I think Sergeant Dixon knows him; I went to the house No. 8 Mulberry-street on Sunday evening to make the arrests; I have been searching for the German described by witnesses as the man with red hair and whiskers; I have had a half-dozen different descriptions of this man from the inmates of the house; they do not say of them agree, and I have arrived at the conclusion that this is a deception being practiced by those connected with the house, for the purpose of misleading us from the right parties; when I went to make the arrests I found Mrs. Mitchell and several of the girls of the house; I asked Mrs. Mitchell where her bar keeper was, and she told me that he had gone to Hoboken; when I told her what my business was, she said that the young men were not struck up stairs at all, that they received their injuries in the street: I was searching about the house, and when I came to a little room at the head of the stairs I found it locked; I asked Mrs. Mitchell to open the door, and she told me that it was occupied by a girl that was sick and had gone away with her key; I told her that I did not believe her, and that if she did not furnish the key I should force the door; she still persisting that she had no key, assisted by other officers I then bursted open the door, and there found Ferdinand Simon, the bar-keeper, lying upon the bed with his clothes on; I found that the door had been locked on the inside and the key taken out; Simon was in his shirt sleeves; I searched the house for a club or slung shot, but did not find any; Mr. Simon appeared very much frightened when I arrested him; my attention was called to the room in which he was concealed by one of the officers who told me that he noticed the door a little ajar when we went in, and my suspicions were further excited by Mrs. Mitchell refusing to give me this key; Mr. Simon was not asleep when we found him on the bed; I asked Mrs. Mitchell where the club was she kept behind the bar, and she answered that she did not know anything about it; after I had arrested Simon, I went down in Mrs. Mitchell's room, where she was fixing to go with us, and asked her what she wanted to lie to me for; to this she could make no answer and appeared very much confused; the character of Mrs. Mitchell's house is reputed bad; when we arrested Simon, Mr. Fraser was with us, and identified him as the man who struck Webb with a club.

The inquest was, at this stage of the proceedings, adjourned to 8 o'clock in the evening.

EVENING SESSION.

The inquest was resumed at the Town-Hall at the appointed hour. The Hall was crowded with people, who seemed to manifest much interest in the examination.

Robert Tyrebel was the first witness. He said: I live at No. 46 Rose-street, New-York; I did not know deceased; I was at Mrs. Mitchill's, No. 8 Mulberry-street, last Saturday evening about 12 o'clock; I went in into the bar room and there saw six men and two women; Mrs. Mitchell was behind the bar as I entered; two of the men were sitting down and four of them were standing in the middle of the room; when I came into the room and called for a drink, the four men were talking very loud and commenced a fight; two or three of them were fighting in the middle of the room; it was the big man who commenced the fight; he went to the man that was sitting on the bench and took him by the shoulders; the man got up and they commenced fighting, when I went into the back, so as not to get into the disturbance; when the man commenced fighting the barkeeper came from behind the bar and told them not to make any disturbance in the house; they were fighting all around the room; the young man with a black moustache had a club; the barkeeper interfered, and tried to separate them; there appeared to be two parties, Germans and Americans; one of the Americans, I think it was the big one who had on the white hat—went down the stairs, and two of the Germans went after him; I then saw the bar-keeper fighting with the two Americans; one of the Americans had hold of the neck and the other was behind him; I then went down stairs into the street; one of the Germans who followed the American out had a black club in his hand; I did not see either of them strike; when I went out of the bar-room, Mrs. Mitchell was behind the bar; I heard one of the Germans who followed the large man out say, "Catch him!" the German who had the cane was a large man, with light hair, and wore a mustache; he was dressed in drab clothes and a black hat on his head; when I came out, there were no persons standing in the hall; there was a girl at the door down stairs; I never saw the two Germans before that night, and have never seen them since; I went to Mrs. Mitchell's that night alone; the fight commenced just after I went in; I had a conversation with Mrs. Mitchell this afternoon about the affair; I did not see the barkeeper strike anybody that night—he only tried to separate those who were fighting; I did not see the German with the cane strike the American with the white hat; the man with the cane had hold of it in the middle, and was close enough to the American to reach him with his hand; I followed them down stairs in less than a minute, and saw the fight going on on the other side of the street.

Wm. Bogue, sworn: I live in Meadow street, Hoboken, and am employed on the Barclay-street ferry boats; I knew Tompkins; some time after 12 o'clock, last Saturday night, I saw two men leading him on the ferry boat; he came over on the boat; I did not hear him say anything; I heard him groan; I saw Webb and Fraser come over on the boat after him; I did not hear them say anything about a difficulty that night; a large man crossed on the boat after daylight; he wore a black cap, and was a man about 5 feet 9 inches high; he had blood on the right hand, and a spot of blood on his left cheek; he came to me and asked if I could give him some water to wash himself in; he had a little blood on the bosom of his shirt; he asked me if there was any blood on his face; the thought did not occur to me that he had been engaged in the fight with the Hoboken boys; I have not seen the man since.

Joseph Reid, sworn: I reside at No. 93 Washington-street, Hoboken; I was intimately acquainted with Mr. Tompkins, and in the habit of seeing him almost daily every day; he wore a white felt hat; himself and myself bought our hats together at a hat store in Nassau street, New-York. Witness was here shown the hat in Court, and testified positively that it was the hat worn by Mr. Tompkins.

John F. Dixon, Sergeant of Police in the Sixth Precinct, New-York, was sworn. His evidence was in substance a corroboration of the testimony of Sergeant Hicks relative to the arrest of the parties at No. 8 Mulberry-street, on Sunday night, and as to the denial of Madame Mitschell that she had the key to the room where the bar-keeper was concealed.

The inquest was here adjourned to Saturday evening, at 6½ o'clock.

The Shooting of Mr. Boyd by Burglars in West Eighteenth-street—Mr. Boyd Still Alive—Arrests on Suspicion.

Mr. ALEXANDER BOYD, who was shot at his residence on Tuesday morning, by a burglar, was alive last evening, though his ultimate recovery was regarded as hopeless. The four bullets in his breast had not been extracted, all efforts to find them with the probe being unavailing, in consequence of his depressed condition.

The affair has occasioned much excitement in the Sixteenth Ward.

Coroner PERRY and the Sixteenth Ward Police were busy Wednesday night and yesterday in examining into the case, and seeking for suspected parties.

Besides the two young men LANDEGAGAN and CAMPBELL, a blacksmith named BOYLE, and a young man named JAMES HENRY MURDAY, were arrested on suspicion of knowing something of the murder. BOYLE was after a brief examination dismissed. The other three are still in custody.

MURDAY is known to have been a companion or associate of LANDEGAGAN and CAMPBELL. When his place was searched, by the police, a light drab cloth (such as the assassin is said to have worn) was found, stained with blood. He was yesterday taken before the dying man, who, when asked, said: "He looks like the one who lit the match before I was shot, but I cannot positively identify him as such."

MURDAY denies any participation in the burglary or shooting, and says that he got the coat from CAMPBELL, previously arrested, and that CAMPBELL got some blood on it a few nights ago while fighting. MURDAY appears not more than 20 or 21 years of age. He is a lathe-maker, and formerly drove a stage.

REV. DR. PRIME AND THE SUPERINTENDENT OF THE NEW YORK AND NEW-HAVEN RAILROAD.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

SIR: The inclosed article has been refused a place in the New-York Observer. Will you publish it?

"The attention of the Superintendent of the New-York and New-Haven Railroad has been called to an article in the New-York Observer, under the head of 'Railroad Management.' To one part of that article he wishes to reply. Called to answer a 'complaint' preferred against him in a 'newspaper,' he responds. The editor says:

'Now that the New Haven Railroad has a large and convenient depôt at Twenty seventh street, we would suggest to the President and Directors the expediency of appointing a civil and intelligent Superintendent of the Road. We have experienced personally the rudeness of the man now in charge, and have privately complained to the President, and have received his pledge of redress, but with no result. All railroad companies prefer that complaints of their servants should be made to the office, and not the newspapers, but when such complaints are properly made, they ought to be attended to. In this case, the conduct of the Superintendent was such as to warrant a complaint to the Grand Jury. On many of our railroads there is a great neglect of the comfort of passengers, the chief object of the companies being to carry the passengers with the least expense. Yet it would cost nothing more to have civil, attentive and competent persons to serve the company and passengers.'

Men are not agreed upon the conduct that may be called 'rudeness' and 'incivility;' and when travellers demand 'nothing more than to be civil, attentive and competent persons to serve the Company and passengers,' testimony may differ about the line of conduct that falls under those very general and convenient forms of expression. A man by much travel in the East and in foreign lands, among serfs and slaves, may get notions on the matter of attention and service that cannot be answered in a land where all who pay their fare must have equal rights. Travel may make a man supercilious, as well as wise. The Editor asserts that he has 'experienced personally the rudeness of the man in charge' of the road; that he has laid his complaint before the 'President;' that in the instance of 'rudeness' complained of 'the conduct of the Superintendent was such as to warrant a complaint to the Grand Jury.' For answer to all this, the Superintendent appeals to the facts in the case, which the Reverend Editor forgot to state. From the sense of personal wrong in the Editor, he appeals to the sense of justice in the readers of the Observer. And he will be content to have them pass upon the facts:

Some months ago—nearly six—Rev. Dr. PRIME rode on a train on this road. He had with him a lady. The lady sat on one seat. Dr. PRIME sat on the opposite seat with his face towards the lady—thus two persons held possession of four seats. The cars were full—and several persons stood in the cars for want of seats. Some gentlemen went to Mr. PRIME and asked him to give up one seat, which he refused. The persons standing up came to the Superintendent and asked for a seat. They were directed to the vacant seats beside Dr. PRIME and lady. They declined to take them, as they did not want a 'quarrel with the occupant.' A brakeman was called in to make room for the persons who had no seats. He politely requested the occupants to allow him to turn the seat over, that the passengers standing might sit, instead of riding backwards. The occupant declined to yield to him. The Superintendent then went to the gentleman, and made room for the standees, and left the editor in possession of all he was entitled to, viz., two seats for two persons. Such are the facts.

If it was civil for Dr. PRIME to occupy four seats when he paid for but two, while gentlemen were standing in the cars, for want of a seat—if it was civil and manly to refuse to relinquish the same, when requested by gentlemen to do so—if it was proper to hold out when notified, by one of the employes of the road, that two gentlemen wanted the unoccupied seats—then the conduct of the Superintendent was unquestionably 'rude' and uncivil in yielding to the standing passengers their rights, and such conduct may make out such a case 'as to warrant a complaint to the Grand Jury.' But not otherwise."

THURSDAY, Aug. 6—P. M.

There was a fair employment for Money, at call, in some few quarters to-day, but the demand in this way is by no means general among the Stock Brokers. On the other hand, Discounts are rather active at Bank, and a good selection of paper is offering by the Discount Brokers. There is no change in rates. The Sub-Treasury received to-day $247,915; paid $102,230; and held, at the close, $12,302,881. The accumulation this week over the Government disbursements is, thus far, only $141,000.

The dullness and tendency to decline in prices at the Stock Exchange, in the early part of the week, were succeeded to-day by a strong demand on the Railway list, and a reaction of 2 ⅌ cent. on several descriptions, and ½@1 ⅌ cent. on others. The heaviest dealings were in New-York and Erie and Philadelphia and Reading. The former touched 33⅞ in the afternoon. Reading sold up to 73 ⅌ cent., though closing 72@72½ ⅌ cent., as against 70½@71 yesterday afternoon. La Crosse further advanced to 35 ⅌ cent., and New-York Central was held for 63 ⅌ cent. at the close. The cash price of Michigan Southern is held pretty steady at 49½@49⅝, although the short sellers continue their efforts to break the market by offering their options a few days ahead at lower rates. The Bulls in the stock are making large profits by accepting these terms and supplying, not exactly stock, of which the supply on the Street grows daily scarcer, but due-bills for stock, in settlement of account deliveries. This operation, so long continued, is, we believe, without precedent. The Bears, thus far, have had much the worst of it, and their opponents see no occasion for a "corner," or even a "combination," while getting from 3 to 5 ⅌ cent. on every turn for putting off the day of final account! There was an improved demand on the Bond list, and some considerable parcels of Missouri sixes and Erie seven ⅌ cents were taken at full rates. The general list closed firm. The English quotations received yesterday have advanced the Bonds and Shares of the Illinois Central. The latter held for 120 at the close, 119½ bid, and for the optional rights 124@125 was the quotation.

The warfare made upon even our best railway property and the prejudices engendered by it have undoubtedly contributed more than any other cause to run up the Bank capital in this City the last year $15,000,000. They have also, indirectly, increased the employment of private capital through the Discount Brokers $10,000,000 or $15,000,000. The consequence is that the question is constantly suggested as to the intrinsic safety of using $65,000,000 instead of $50,000,000 Bank Capital. On each recurring weekly Bank Statement, the very parties and presses who have made war upon the New-York Central and other prime Railway Stocks and Bonds, and thus forced capital into other channels of employment, raise the cry of wild expansion and excessive banking. And the same gentlemen also feel, or affect to feel, the utmost alarm at the various facilities afforded through Banks and the Discount Brokers to over importation. That a substantial increase of private capital, notwithstanding the forced depreciation in value on the class of securities referred to, is yearly taking place in this City and all over the country, there is no doubt.

The United States never before knew so prosperous a year as the financial or trade year ending 30th June, 1856. And the probability is that the forthcoming statistics from the Treasury Department, for the year ending 30th June last, will abundantly prove, as our bankers and merchants already feel, that the year 1857 is yet more profitable. Both seasons were marked by an export trade in excess of the imports, and by the most singular and gratifying freedom from great mercantile disasters and currency troubles. The profits of the two years have been enormous, and mostly to our own people. The export lists have returned upon nearly every great staple larger results than are shown on the Treasury tables. In other words, the resulting profits have, in no sense, proved fallacious. They are substantial private wealth, and when taking the form of money capital, must find employment in one of two or three ways. Railway securities may be decried and depreciated, but the business world of the United States will not stand still, nor has it failed to accumulate. The Banks and Discount Brokers are the favored mediums through which much of this accumulation is employed to pay an income to the owners. They have thus far had good success, because they have had the public confidence. Bank integrity has not yet been systematically assailed and so Bank management has been left to make the most out of the Capital and Deposits entrusted to it. Mercantile credit, though occasionally threatened through the shortest sight of the Wall-Street destructives, has kept itself generally sound. It has had every motive and every facility to preserve a good report before the world; so that the Discount Brokers are doing well for their customers, on both sides—for the makers and sellers of the paper entrusted to them, and for the private capitalists, who constantly buy from them, because they have been literally frightened out of another class of securities intrinsically as sound, paying, in most instances, an equal income, and really subject, in times of general trouble in business, to fewer startling contingencies or sudden bankruptcies than mercantile bills. To be sure, the latter have had better success of late years than some of the Railways. They have had greater facilities to uniform punctuality. The makers have at no time been arrested mid-way their enterprises or adventures, by scandalous assaults through the Stock Exchange, to stop their credit at Bank and in the Discount Offices, or to force them into extraordinary and expensive channels of negotiation to preserve their fair name from the notary, and their future fortunes in business from ruin.

To return to the question of Bank expansion. It is quite certain that the public will soon become accustomed to the line of $120,000,000, or even $130,000,000, in loans and discounts on the enlarged capital of $65,000,000. The safety of the operation is altogether a relative term so long as the capital is real, and the loans are put to a steady, legitimate use by the borrowers. The danger of expansion lies beyond the bank counter. The increased trade of the country, and the concentrated or centralized money transactions in New-York, may better justify $130,000,000 on $65,000,000 than $100,000,000 loaned on $50,000,000 of capital a year or so since. The stopping point in the inquiry of real moment. Perhaps that has now been reached. It is even possible that some few of the old Banks, as well as the new, have ventured beyond it; in which case, the prudence of their managers will suggest a reduction of dividends, rather than a forced increase of business. Conversing with one of the most experienced of our cashiers, not long since, he candidly expressed the apprehension that his own Bank, which had recently doubled its capital, might have to come down to 7 ⅌ cent. dividends, instead of 8 ⅌ cent. He would certainly favor such an alternative to the danger of going outside of his own accustomed rules of sound and legitimate banking merely to sustain the old dividend charge upon the new capital. This feeling will probably extend to other of our large and well directed Banks, thereby inducing cautious and rather repressing the further increase of capital until the profits and practical working of the present enlarged line can be tested by another active season's business, such as we are soon to enter upon in moving the new crops of the country. Meanwhile, the gamblers for a fall on the Stock Exchange will make nothing out of their weekly creaking over the Bank Loans. They tried a similar game earlier in the Summer, on the Specie line. They looked for a concession because of the shipments abroad, and were only astonished and disappointed by a plethora in the Money Market. The country did ship twenty millions in gold in two months, and proved its ability to ship as much more, if need be. And so with our merchants and the Bank loans. They are able to owe $120,000,000, and expect soon, if need be, to borrow ten millions more. The Banks, in turn, have heretofore lent over one hundred millions on fifty millions of capital, and will lend one hundred and thirty on sixty-five millions, if the state of the exchanges should justify it. It is not probable, therefore, that the war of the Stock Exchange can be transferred from the Railways to the Banks, after spending its force upon the former, as it now seems to have done. It might, to be sure, be vastly convenient to check the returning sense of appreciation in the public for this much and wickedly abused class of securities, by striking down confidence in another, but the attempt will hardly succeed. The season is not propitious to panic-making. The true state of the country is against it.

The receipts and expenditures of the United States for the quarter ending on the 30th of June last, exclusive of Treasury Notes, Funded and Trust Funds, were as follows:
